THE CONSCIOUSNESS COMPONENT

By Geoffrey Hoppe

In my very early days in marketing and communications, graphic artists used airbrushing tools to touch-up photos of people and products. They could take the blemishes off someone's facial portrait or make mud disappear off the side of a car photo. It was a cumbersome process, and to the trained eye it was relatively easy to see that it was airbrushed. Then along came desktop computers in the mid-1980s. Photoshop opened a whole new world to the graphic arts community, yet it still took a lot of time and talent to do it correctly. Don't like the telephone pole sticking up in the middle of a nature photo? Photoshop it out.

Now with the advent of Artificial Intelligence, there's no telling what is "real" and what's been conjured up by Chippie. Just the past two years have seen a mammoth global push to incorporate AI into just about every facet of human life. AI software can read, write, speak, hear, smell, illustrate, compose music, play games and read your thoughts (brain signals). OpenAI released ChatGPT on November 30, 2022, less than one year ago. It took the digital industry by storm and now just about everything is getting an infusion of AI. Like it or not, AI-generated products are one of the fastest growing parts of our daily lives.

In the coming years, it will be very difficult to know whether or not something is AI-generated or "real." You'll see celebrities giving endorsements for products, but they never actually did because AI created the fake. Politicians will make statements that they never actually said. Cute little kittens will be flying through the air with incredible realism but it never actually happened. Your dentist will be working at home from another city on the other side of the world while her AI robot works on your teeth.

Crimson Circle is already diving deep into AI. We made a conscious decision to understand it, train for it and use it. Some of our Shaumbra Magazine covers have been AI-generated this year, and the illustrations of the entities for the Light of the Merlin online event were AI-generated. The new video for the upcoming Shoud Series is AI-generated. Our technical team is integrating AI into our back-office functions such as online search engines, our massive database and the CC store. We're looking into capabilities such as AI translation of Adamus' messages, where my voice will be translated into a variety of languages and still sound exactly like my voice but in a different language (my original voice and text transcripts will still always be available).

Our future-vision is to offer the capability to "talk" with Adamus, Tobias, Kuthumi and the other entities in a conversational manner, rather than just type your prompts into the search engine and get back a flat text reply. You'll be able to sit at your computer or mobile phone while viewing an animated image of the entities, with their mouth and face moving as they speak. AI will pull appropriate information from our library and present it just like they are talking with you. For instance, you could ask Adamus, "What was life like in Atlantis?" and he will respond as if he was chatting with you on a Zoom call. You could ask Tobias to explain the origins of the word Shaumbra and he'd talk about the Essenes in the time of Yeshua, and throw in some AI-generated graphics as well.

We have an in-house team of 10 technical experts headed by Jorge Merino. We built the team not only to work on our website and store, but also because we knew we had to be at the forefront of AI. Why? Because AI is the fastest-growing part of our human lives. It's here to stay, and the advances over the next few years are going to be breath-taking. It will change life as we know it and is one of the driving forces behind the new human species.

It won't do Shaumbra any good to be Luddites¹ about AI. The floodgate is open and there's no turning back. Plus, the more we as Shaumbra understand and use AI, the more we're going to be able to do what we came here to do in this lifetime. Adamus calls it the "Consciousness Component." He goes so far as to say our true calling in this lifetime wasn't even about Realization. That was a given, and something we could have allowed even a few lifetimes ago. We're here to bring in consciousness and light as AI takes off from the launch pad, all at this time of the Apocalypse. Without the Consciousness Component present in mass consciousness, the chances of things going bad with AI – I mean really bad – is almost inevitable. With the Consciousness Component, those who are developing and working with AI will be able to see the higher potentials of how it can serve humanity and our entire matter-based reality.

In the coming months and years, we'll be confronted with wondering if something is "genuine" or the product of AI. Is the news clip real or did someone have AI create a story about poison accidentally getting into a huge batch of Coca-Cola? Is the photo of an acquaintance on vacation in Jamaica real, or was it AI-generated? Did one of the CC Product Review team members write the review about Light of the Merlin or did they have ChatGPT write it? Our world is going to become a guessing game about the very nature of this reality.

AI offers numerous benefits, streamlining processes, enhancing efficiency, and solving complex problems across industries. In healthcare, AI aids in diagnostics and personalized treatments, while in finance, it improves fraud detection and risk management. However, drawbacks include ethical concerns like bias in algorithms, potential job displacement due to automation, and privacy issues in data handling. The opaque nature of some AI decision-making processes raises questions about accountability. Striking a balance between harnessing AI's potential and addressing its drawbacks is crucial for a future where artificial intelligence contributes positively to society, respects ethical standards, and ensures the well-being of individuals and communities.

Please note: The above paragraph was composed by ChatGPT with a simple prompt from me to write about the pros and cons of AI in 150 words or less. This is a very, very small example of what I'm talking about. How will you know when something is human-created, or AI-generated?

We've had deep discussions about this within the Crimson Circle. We're going to keep diving into AI because the Consciousness Component is one of the primary reasons we're here. We need to understand it, use it and enhance our human lives with it. We've already received a few emails from Shaumbra scolding us for encouraging the use of AI and for using it in some of our graphics. Perhaps they think we should close our eyes to it, or hide in the woods to avoid it. Some may think we should battle it because of the potential for world destruction at the hands of AI. Instead, we're simply going to serve as the Consciousness Component at this Time of Machines.

Our commitment to Shaumbra is to clearly identify when we use AI for anything that is presented to Shaumbra. Whether it's a cover for the Shaumbra Magazine, a graphic for a Cloud Class, a music composition for a merab, or anything else that is put forth to Shaumbra, we'll clearly mark it with the "AI" symbol as well as text saying "AI Generated." This way there will never be a question about who or what created the product. When you sit down to talk to virtual Adamus, the "AI Generated" icon ✨ and text will make it very clear where it's coming from. Of course, the AI-Adamus will be using our library database to craft its conversations, without drawing on any outside sources, but we still want absolute transparency. Life is going to become confusing enough with AI-generated everything, so we don't want you to ever worry about what's genuine and what's AI-generated from the Crimson Circle.

I find it fascinating that I'm even writing an article about this. We're at an epic time in history when the very nature of reality is blurring. Perhaps that's a good thing because humanity is coming to explore the very meaning of reality and consciousness. We're here for our most important mission ever – as the Crimson Circle Consciousness Component. That's the 4-C's. Or... Foresee.

GEOFFREY HOPPE

Geoffrey Hoppe founded the Crimson Circle in 1999 after a series of conversations with the angelic being known as Tobias. He left the corporate world in 2001 to devote his full time to the Crimson Circle, along with his wife Linda. Geoff channeled Tobias until 2009 when Tobias returned to earth in a new incarnation known as Sam. Tobias handed off his guidance role with the Crimson Circle to Adamus Saint-Germain, a facet of the Beloved St. Germain who has been working with humans for hundreds of years. Geoff has been the messenger of Adamus Saint-Germain ever since.

A GLOBAL GATHERING OF THE NEW LIGHT

The annual Merlin gathering was two days full of information, inspiration, and New Light! If you missed the live event, you can still get the full experience as a streaming Cloud Class. Text translations are already underway and will be listed on the store page as soon as they are ready. Check it out!

With grand collaboration between Angels and Masters, CC staff and Shaumbra, this event ushers in a New Energy era for Planet Earth. Hosted from the other realms by Adamus Saint-Germain and with profound messages from Gaia, Steve Jobs, Merlin, Kuthumi, and Beloved St. Germain, the information and energy delivered are literally out of this world. And, thanks to the light streaming in since Heaven's Cross, our beloved Earth is evolving into what we always knew was possible – a true planet of light.

In addition to these incredible presentations, Geoffrey and Linda Hoppe offer insights into Crimson Circle, followed by a distillation of over twenty years of wisdom in the form of 21 Shaumbra Realizations. These sessions, along with several new "Faces of Shaumbra" videos, serve to create a memorable and soul-touching experience, one that you won't want to miss.

BEING THERE

By Jean Tinder

Co-creating this event with our amazing team was challenging, intense, and magical!

SEPTEMBER 9, 2023

4:30 AM – Alarm clocks wake the sleepy crew. We pull on clothes, pour some coffee and gather in the Shaumbra Pavilion by 5:30 AM, yawning and hoping everything goes well today.

6:00 AM – Preceded by Belle and her ever-wagging tail, Geoff & Linda show up for the sound check and breathing with the team. We can feel the energy building and everything looks good.

7:00 AM – We're on the air! But – oh crap – Linda's mic isn't working. Sometime during the last 45 minutes her equipment decided to bow out of the event. Even the backup mic won't work. The show keeps going, but heads are exploding behind the scenes and we forget stuff, such as turning off the distracting monitor for Adamus' channel. Sorry Geoff! Everything gets handled, Adamus welcomes viewers from around the world, and we're off and running.

8:30 AM – After a frantic rush to figure out a solution to the sound issue, the problem is solved seconds before we're back on air. But now Geoff's mic is garbled! Is that smoke coming out of the sound guy's ears? Just before we have to stop the show, the garble magically clears up and we keep rolling. Oops, remember to breathe. Thanks Linda!

10:00 AM – Relieved that Kuthumi's message came through without a hitch, the crew gets some air and breakfast during the longer break, still baffled by the garble in Geoff's mic. It only happens when we're live, not when we're testing it. WTF?

10:30 AM – The energies seem to be settling and Gaia's message lands gently. Feeling into the story of light becoming matter becoming nature becoming us, while listening to the birds and breezes all around, is nicely soothing to our rattled nerves.

12:00 PM – It feels like a whole day has passed but it's barely noon. Will the mic hold up under the energies of Adamus live? Well, between the staff's genius and the genie's magic, there are no more hiccups, and we breathe deeply with relief and gratitude as Linda closes the day. Time to go home for a nap.

SEPTEMBER 10, 2023

4:30 AM – Those darn alarm clocks again! Who decided on this ungodly hour? Oh right, we're webcasting from Hawaii and it's already evening for the viewers on the other side of the world. They're going to be up late. Fortified with buckets of coffee, today will surely be smoother than yesterday. And it is!

6:00 AM – Another sound check, and the technology appears to be in a cooperative mood. We are dubiously hopeful.

7:00 AM – After a sweet video of Shaumbra with their pets (which we can enjoy a little more than the previous ones), Geoff and Linda share 21 Shaumbra Realizations, the result of months of distilling decades of wisdom. Everything is flowing smoothly.

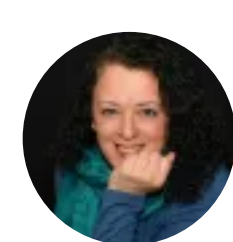

8:30 AM – It's time to hear from Steve Jobs. Oddly, I feel restless and fidgety while this (previously recorded) channel plays, so I wander out into the garden. After the break, Geoff says that Adamus said that Steve was right there in the room with us. Guess I was feeling crowded.

10:30 AM – As our longer break comes to an end, with less than a minute to go, the webcast computer crashes. A quick restart and we're back, just a minute or two late, with a collective sigh of relief. Amazing that this stuff happens mostly during breaks! The energy is flowing as Merlin comes in to talk about not just metaphysics, but Christos Physics. I am inspired.

12:00 PM – Are we at the last session already? It feels like we just got started... sometime last week. Time is weird. Since this is a live channel, we swap out Geoff's mic for a hopefully cooperative backup, and welcome in Beloved St. Germain. After all that ALL of us have been through these last months, years, lifetimes, he declares that we've crossed a line; the planet is now firmly on the path to becoming the utopia we've always dreamed it could be. It's a very uplifting way to end a challenging and dynamic event. The crew is exhausted, a little bleary and very happy as we watch the final video, "I Am that I Am." It's a fitting way to bring this magical worldwide gathering to a close.

Hey, let's do it again next year! ☺

A DIVINE PARADOX

By Nina JF Gauss

A funny thing happened on the way to embodied mastery. I lost everything and then became an ordinary human being.

Let me elaborate...

After the Heaven's Cross opening in March, I received an internal memo that it would take me until the end of August to integrate the incoming energies and balance everything out. And while the initial exhaustion and average of 10-12 hours of sleep every night eased off around May, other things drastically intensified, particularly the falling away of old structures and patterns. And just the last two months were something else. My mother fell in her garden, shattering her right arm and shoulder, needing four weeks in the hospital and now special care at home. During the same time another family member suddenly died of a heart attack, others were rushed to the hospital, and several are facing serious health issues. It's like everyone around me is suddenly keeling over, creating huge shifts in the usual order of things.

With all this going on, I knew I needed to prepare myself for what was inevitably to come. Big changes were in the air, causing big fears and anxieties to bubble up, and I've had to constantly remind myself, "It's all going to work out. I may not know how yet, but somehow it will work out."

Family issues are not always just black and white; they come in many shades of grey. While there may be some rather difficult and challenging patterns, there are also many good and loving things we can experience with them. So, lately the question came up in me a lot, "Will I be okay without them?"

At the same time, while all of this was happening around me, I also felt a deep, inner calm; a sense of observational objectivity and neutrality about everything going on. I felt an acceptance of all that is, even while rushing about dealing with so many different things, taking care of my mother, running errands for her, buying food, and going to the hospital frequently. All of which triggered a few aspects that I observed gradually emerging from the shadows.

For example, I have a very filial aspect based on the idea that no matter how difficult they may have been at one time, one simply doesn't abandon one's elders when they are in need. I've been dealing with my own health issues and body pains over the last year, often feeling like I'm falling apart myself, yet here I am again, putting my own needs on the back burner to jump in to help, just like I have always done. This created a lot of internal conflict and exhaustion, while another part of me was simply observing it all.

RECEIVE EVERYTHING

Then one morning, Adamus suddenly popped in loud and clear: Receive everything. And I mean e.v.e.r.y.t.h.i.n.g. Not just the shiny, glittery, nice stuff. Everything. Whatever shows up now, be okay with it. Breathe.

It took me a few days to understand the underlying message, which was ultimately "Receive the change. It's all yours." (Although, on some days it feels more like, "Thanks, but keep the change.") In other words, allow the re-ordering of things. Don't fight it. Don't battle with it. Allow it all.

Adamus' words instantly calmed me down, and the aspects quieted as well. And with that, a funny thing happened. New alternatives emerged. My mother organized home help for herself, and it's working out so wonderfully that I am no longer needed on a daily basis. Problem solved. And, after a bit of acting out, my somewhat arrogant "I am needed aspect" is now integrated.

With all this deeper understanding and clarity, I arrived at my designated point of integration and balance at the end of August. So, how's that going?

A BRIEF RECAP

About 25 years ago, it felt like I was suddenly taken out of my human path, an arrested (human) development so to speak. In hindsight, that seems to be the time when the realm working mission started.

Any human aspirations, such as completing my studies with a PhD, evaporated overnight. Literally. I had to pack up and leave London after living there for years (long story), and nothing thereafter ever really worked out. Career? Piff. Relationships? A disaster. Sure, I had mini breakthroughs, little successes here and there, and I raised two kids. But it was basically twenty-plus years of my own dark shit continuously hitting the fan, with intermittent phases of intense integration and release as well.

The last few years, especially, were incredibly intense in terms of realm work, allowing my realization, and the beginning of big and growing shifts. It's been a time of rapid expansion that often took my breath away. My experiences in the other realms were off the charts, while in this earth realm, the old was crumbling, one thing after the other collapsing and falling away. It was a time filled with many beautiful experiences plus a lot of WTFs.

LE GRAND VOID

And then one day, a few weeks after Heaven's Cross, I found myself in utter limbo. Suddenly, there was nothing. Everything was gone. My passions, visions, aspirations, hopes and dreams, people, even any desire to stay here, all gone. There was no-thing left except boredom, deep depression and feeling utterly useless.

It was akin to what creative types know as "post-production-blues," the falling away of everything after a big project has been completed. After having been frantically busy, active, and productive, suddenly it's a wrap. At first, there is exhilaration, but then it's goodbye to all the people one has worked with and moving on to the next. Only now, it felt like there was no "next," only me, my Self, and I, suspended in the endless void of nothingness for what felt like an eternity but was probably just a few minutes, days, weeks perhaps.

There was still some wrapping up to do in the other realms, very intense dreams, but in a general human sense I felt utterly useless.

SHALL I STAY OR SHALL I GO?

What next? I asked myself. What do I do now? I don't feel like doing anything, but shouldn't I be doing something? No, not really. What's the point of sticking around then? To shine? Sounds a bit boring hanging around on benches all day doing fuck all, other than glow, smile, and drink coffee. I mean, come on. Really? There's got to be more. I want to live!!! Really live!!! Dammit!!!

Well, in that case, came the reply, what do you really want to experience then? and I realized how difficult this was to answer. I had become so used to living a reactive life – reacting to things, people, their expectations, situations, circumstances; my life a string of responses to outer triggers – that it now feels unnatural to just freely choose from deep within. But this is the freedom I now have. So, what will it be?

Ach, this is harder than I thought. So, I left it. Don't think about it. Trust that it'll come at the right time, and eventually it did.

To my own surprise, I found myself increasingly drawn to the hustle and bustle of human life, wanting to do human things, and feeling incredibly excited about being part of life again. This means that I'm going back to university in a few weeks, basically continuing where I left off 25 years ago. But isn't that going back into mass consciousness? Isn't studying too mental??

Yes – and it's wonderful! I knew it was absolutely the right thing for me, because before applying, I felt excited, joyful, and happy about choosing this. I could sense so many new potentials opening up because of it, a whole new life!

So here I am, returning to my "normal" human life but in a whole new way, while everything of the last few decades suddenly feels like a very long dream.

A REALIZATION

And here's my realization with all this. Diving back into humanity does not mean "giving up" or turning my back on mastery. On the contrary, I'm fully integrating it in the here and now and running with it.

We – me, my Self and I – are now Master and human, fully integrated, shining wherever we go, enjoying the rest of our lives as humans on this planet however we please. Exhausted from swimming in timelessness, I find myself craving a routine again. Yet I can still choose to be timeless even when in time. My only worry is punctuality – or my renowned lack thereof. But I am immensely looking forward to getting up early in the morning again (even knowing I will struggle with this) and having to be somewhere by 8 a.m. using public transport and being stuck in traffic jams. I am excited about getting on a crammed bus again!!! WTF?!

I really had to laugh at all this. At first, I was concerned that perhaps I was regressing, falling back into old human patterns, a kind of resignation, until I recently chatted with another Shaumbra who is experiencing something very similar. I immediately messaged him, "You too, huh?" "Yep" Relief! It's not just me then.

Mastery is not just about fluffy unicorns pissing rainbows or a sense of spiritual aloofness, floating off somewhere in shiny robes throwing about spiritual platitudes while suffering from mass consciousness. Nor is it about being all smiley and happy-skippy-la-la or, as some wish, suddenly rich and all problems vanished. No, embodied realization is about being fully present in the here and now as a human and Master, integrated as one.

I never was a great fan of the notion "We need to protect ourselves from mass consciousness" or "I can't deal with muggles," as that comes from a victim mentality, denying one's own human aspect with its human needs, wants and desires while trying to lift oneself above it.

Yes, retreating from mass consciousness for a while was necessary and appropriate but are we really going to spend the rest of our last lifetime locked up at home, avoiding life itself with all that it has to offer, just awaiting our timely departure? Nah. It's ultimately a personal choice, but I certainly don't want to spend my remaining time that way. I am sick and tired of hiding at home, pretending the world out there doesn't exist or is too difficult and challenging for me to deal with. Fuck that! No more Shaumbra-snowflake here!

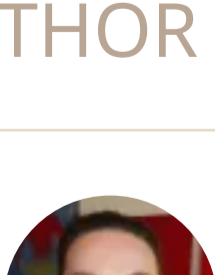

I'm even sick and tired of Netflix! I want to live my own story now! It's all my energy anyway. It's all me, my perception, so what is there to be afraid of?

So, I'm ready to put on my best coat, go outside and explore all that my own energy has in store for me!

My conclusion is that true mastery is having lifted off into the ethers, only to now hit the tarmac so integrated that one can walk among the masses and totally live and enjoy life as it comes, and leave with a huge, fulfilled smile on my face. THAT is the true mastery of an authentic, embodied-in-life Master.

Big words, yes. I'll let you know how it goes...

PROGNOST 2023 UPDATE

Four Factors of a Changing World

Cost: $60 (through November 1, 2023; $75 thereafter)

Format: Streaming video, audio, and online text e-reader

Access: 90 days

In this "full Crimson Alert" Adamus asks Shaumbra to stay present and very aware of what's happening on the planet. You chose to be here as bearers of light, and AI is the thing most affected by the new level of light. In just four months since Heaven's Cross, the level of consciousness has measurably increased, and will expand by at least 7% in the coming 2-3 years. This means drastic changes in every area of life, with the strong potential that Earth will ultimately become a planet of light populated by beings of light. Practical

Artificial Intelligence is rapidly expanding, and Adamus says that the power games and limitations of darkness will attempt to use it to stay active as long as possible. However, the one thing that will illuminate the darkness is allowing, receiving, and radiating your own light. This "un-battle" is the fulfillment of our entire journey and it's happening right now.

Let your light, your consciousness, now dance with this gravity. It brings your wings back.

META CHANGES: HEAVEN'S CROSS FOLLOW-UP

Physics of the New Light

Cost $33

Format: Downloadable audio, video & text

Access: Unlimited

Humans are accustomed to slow-paced evolutionary, societal, and personal changes, but it's like rearranging a room with the same furniture. Adamus says that meta change can only occur when the level of light changes. With the New Light coming in since the Apocalypse, the literal physics of reality are changing, bringing transcendence, magic, and perhaps temporary anxiety. It is all caused by light filling the space between thoughts, potentials, atoms, everything. Being in this divine flow brings a new level of clarity, ease, and grace. It is literally meta-physics expressing in your everyday human life!

As the New Light "backfills" the space between, it becomes an ocean of divinity connecting everything. This is the culmination of The Way that began with the Essenes more than 2,000 years ago, and an example of the new physics that are coming to humanity.

We are going cosmic. We're going multidimensional. It breaks the old patterns. All things are possible.

TIME TRAVELING: METAPHYSICS OF THE SOUL

Putting Time to Work for You

Cost $150 (through September 29, 2023; $195 thereafter)

Format: Online streaming

Access: View for 90 days after purchase

Humans have always dreamed of traveling in time. We want to see what's ahead or change the past, always hoping for a better present. Now, Adamus explains how time traveling really works. We go beyond linear reality into circular time, where both the past and the future are changeable. In advanced metaphysics, you'll discover that some things in the past haven't happened yet, and some events in the future have already been experienced.

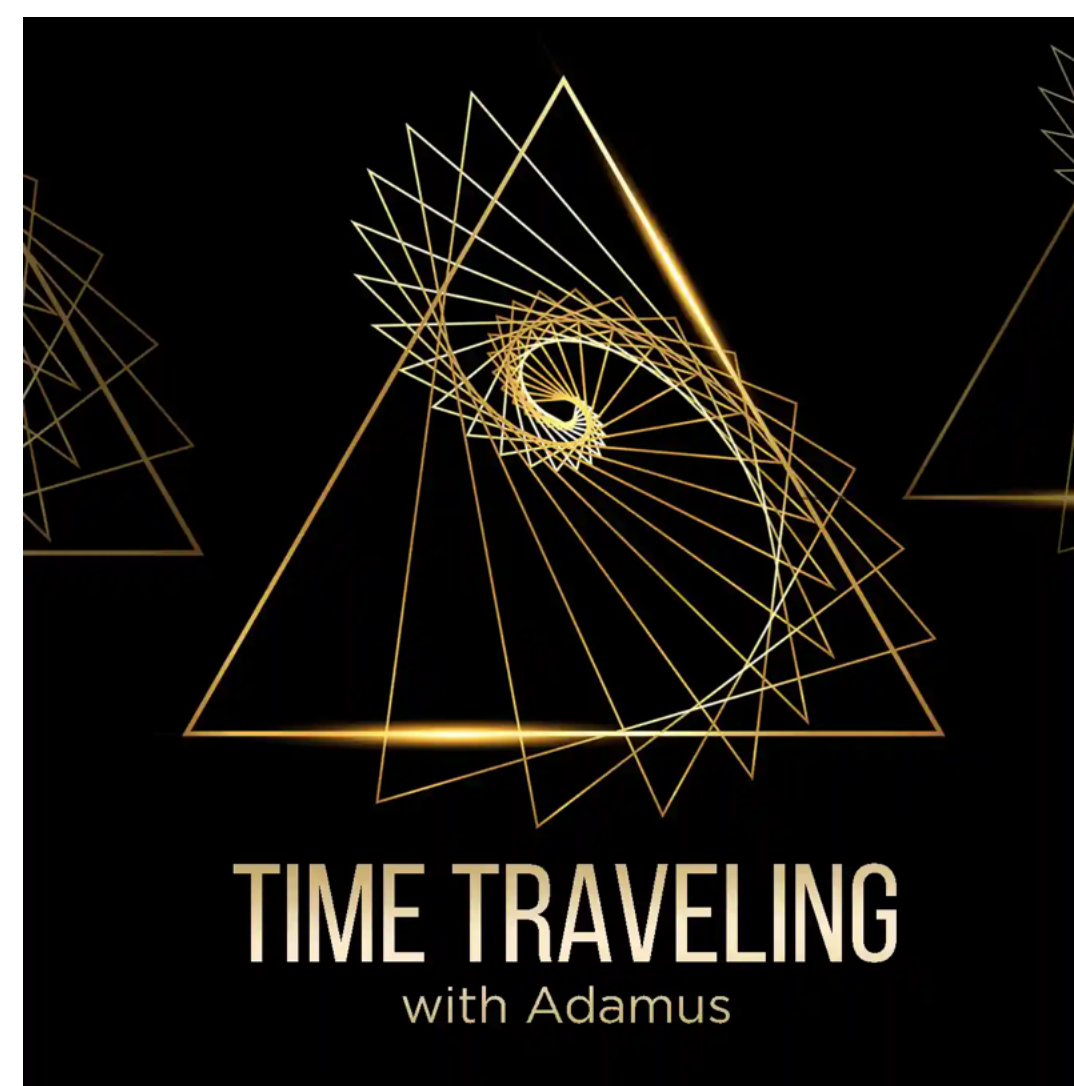

From the illumination of Presence, you'll discover how to change the past, visit the future, and collect the wisdom from all your lifetimes. True time traveling can literally change your life.

The future is the past illuminated. The past is the future illuminated. It's all about illumination, about letting the light shine.

SURPRISED BY JOY

By Clare Gately

My niece celebrated her birthday recently and she sent me a video of her little 3-year-old son Fiann helping his dad to carry the cake and sing Happy Birthday to her. As you can imagine, this is not the first lovely video I have received over the past 3 years of his life, so I was taken by surprise at my reaction. Feeling what seemed like a very deep emotional pain come rushing up to the surface, I burst into tears.

For many reasons the video warranted a second viewing. As I watched this adorable little boy sing Happy Birthday, I observed how he was putting his whole being into the song. He gave it 200% all the way through. At the very end he jumped up and down, fists punching the air, shouting "hurrah, hurrah!" I don't think I have ever witnessed such an embodiment of joy, enthusiasm, and love.

The emotional pain remained as I completed the second viewing; but I had also arrived at an explanation. I realized that there was a deep longing in me to feel that way about my life again; to feel that way about living on Earth.

My own birthday is coming up soon and I truly wish I could be as excited about it as little Fiann was about his mama's birthday. I would love to be able to get a cake and candles for myself and truthfully sing a full-bodied Happy Birthday to me, including hurrahs, fist punches, and jumps. A true proclamation to the universe that I love being alive and can't wait for whatever the next year will bring. An acknowledgement to myself of what I have done here on the planet through so many lifetimes. My mind tells me I'm not there yet with that level of enthusiasm, the Master says, "It's only a breath away," and an aspect pops its head in and replies "Yeah, right!"

After Heaven's Cross and the completion of my mission as a Realm Worker, I made the soul-level decision to stay to be an embodied Master, but it was not a full bodied 'yes to life' human-level decision. Not even close. It was more of a 'I haven't gone through all that shit for lifetimes just to leave now before the good stuff arrives' sort of choice. Perhaps you may relate to that one!

I love benching and am aware that, on this planet, my presence alone is enough. I've always known that. However, I also know that I have a huge creative capacity that surges in me, calling out for action, and it is not happy 'just' sitting on a bench radiating light.

Most of the creative ideas and inspirations that have floated in over the past 20 years have, after an initial excitement, fizzled out pretty quickly. I have attributed this to my lack of energy, which in turn was perhaps due to splitting myself between Earth and the collective unconscious, taking on the clearing of all sorts of gunk (silly, silly soul)! However, this inability to create led to huge frustration and despair. I developed an aspect that, as soon as an idea came to me, would whisper seductively, "Why bother? You know what happened the last time. It won't go anywhere. What's the point of even trying."

Beneath all this turmoil over the years, there is a quality that has kept me going through everything, one which I probably share with most Shaumbra: determination. It has been with me my whole life and is what has kept me on this planet. As a child it was the determination that, when I was an adult, I would find the answers to the many questions I had that no one else could answer.

Through all the years of clearing, processing, fatigue, and frustration, it was the determination that I would figure out what all 'that' was about before I died; determined not to be on my death bed saying, "What the fuck was that life about?" Being a Realm Worker has answered so many of those questions and I feel much more at peace with life.

And now, determination, my oldest and longest friend is here to keep me focused on allowing a true passion and joy for life to arise within me. A passion that goes way beyond what I have known before, otherwise what's the point? It's not about going back to some previous measure of happiness but forward into unknown levels and potentials. After all, it is new energy, not a rehashing of the old.

In true Shambra style, it's about raising the bar of joy for all humanity, demonstrating to the world that joy is our inherent birthright and does not depend on anything outside of us to evoke it. Equally, as an inherent state of being, circumstances should not be able to take it away. Mastery indeed!

In truth, it is a 'Happy Birthday' to all of us who have stayed after Heaven's Cross and are learning to walk and talk the New Energy. Perhaps it's time for all of us, birthday or not, to get the cake and candles out and truly honour who we are, because no one else knows what we've been through to get this far.

And, while many of us may be still feeling a little 'Humpty Dumpty like,' splattered and discombobulated, let's remember we are in the New Energy so we can certainly be put back together again. We don't have to wait for any King's horses or men. We are Masters. We do it ourselves. We do it by allowing everything to come together by itself.

I have deep gratitude to my little grandnephew for being an embodiment of joy and reminding me that it's time for me to follow suit. And while I may not be able yet to give a full bodied "Yes!" to life and living on earth, I know my old friend determination is with me, and it hasn't failed me yet. Hurrah! Hurrah!

CC TIPS

Monthly suggestions and recommendations to help make your Crimson Circle experience smoother and easier!

CREATING A SAFE CYBERSPACE WITH SHAUMBRA – PART 2

Crimson Circle has a plan to keep a safe cyberspace, and it involves YOU.

We will soon require multifactor authentication (MFA) to use the CC store. Please keep reading for more information!

As we mentioned in our CC tips article last month, we're diving deeper into the realm of Safe Cyberspace.

For this month's article, we sat down with Jorge Merino, Crimson Circle's Technology Manager, to get the inside scoop on how we're safeguarding Crimson Circle's systems. Jorge is the wizard behind the digital curtains, and we wanted to know what it takes to keep our sacred online space safe and secure, ensuring your safety while you roam our digital platforms.

Shaumbra Magazine: Hi Jorge. The entire team has talked on numerous occasions about cyber security. We know you guys are always pretty busy working on this, but today we wanted you to give Shaumbra an inside look at Crimson Circle's plan to make sure that both payment and personal information stay safe when they shop online in the CC store.

Jorge Merino
Crimson Circle Technology Manager

Jorge Merino: Here at Crimson Circle, we want Shaumbra to feel safe and secure when sharing their personal information with us. That's why our tech team follows strict PCI DSS regulations to keep payments and other details protected. These regulations are crucial for anyone who handles customer information, and we take them very seriously.

Surprisingly, not all companies do this, but it's been a core principle for Crimson Circle from day one.

What is the PCI DSS?

It is the Payment Card Industry Data Security Standard, which is a global forum that develops standards for safe payments worldwide.

What do we need to do to comply with the standard?

We have been working hard to make sure that Shaumbra's information is kept safe and protected. To do this, we have added extra measures to our servers. Every 90 days, we send a report to the PCI to check everything carefully. This report makes sure that all our databases are coded correctly and our software is updated.

We work very hard to check if our systems have any problems. We use special tools from other companies to test if someone can break into our systems. Our team leaders regularly check important parts of our business like the store, website, and online Connection Center. They are also ready to fix any problems that might come up.

What are some of the challenges you have to deal with?

Our websites always have a difficult task to keep up with changing internet programs. When the programs are updated, they might have new ways to keep the websites safe, which could affect how they work. To keep up, we update our software often and add new rules to follow these new policies.

Actually, the most demanding task we have is the constant upgrading of operating systems, programming languages, and databases, along with patching our systems and software.

What can Shaumbra do to stay safe while using our systems and other systems they encounter every day?

To make sure a device is safe and working well, one needs to do three things: update the system, update the web browser, and avoid adding plugins (Chrome has many plugins).

When you talk about plugins, is it the same as extensions?

That is correct.

Plugins and extensions are programs that you can add to your web browser, such as Firefox, Chrome, Safari, and others. However, you need to be careful when using them because they may not be fully checked by the browser makers. Some of them can even take your private information, like passwords, without you knowing it. So, it's important to be cautious when using them, and if possible, prevent all of them from being on your system.

Another important thing is to add an extra layer of security to your accounts by using multi-factor authentication or MFA. Many apps offer this feature, and I suggest using Google Authenticator, which is well-known and supported, or others from Microsoft or other vendors.

Another option is allowing the application to send a confirmation email, which is the second most secure option.

Some people prefer the SMS or text message option, but in my opinion, these are not very secure.

Why are SMS not that secure?

If someone steals your phone, they can easily take out the chip or SIM card and use it on another phone and steal your identity. Also, it's easy for someone to hack and impersonate you if they know your phone number. So, it's better to use a more secure authentication method.

What if a website does not offer the MFA option?

For websites without the multifactor authentication option enabled, like ours at the moment, the good practice is to have passwords with 12 characters (including numbers and symbols) and change them at least every 90 days.

Will Crimson Circle implement this multi-factor authentication option to log into the store in the future?

Yes. This is a layer we have been working on for the past few months. We are implementing multifactor authentication, and will offer two options to verify your identity:

- Use the Authenticator app
- Send the emails with the access code

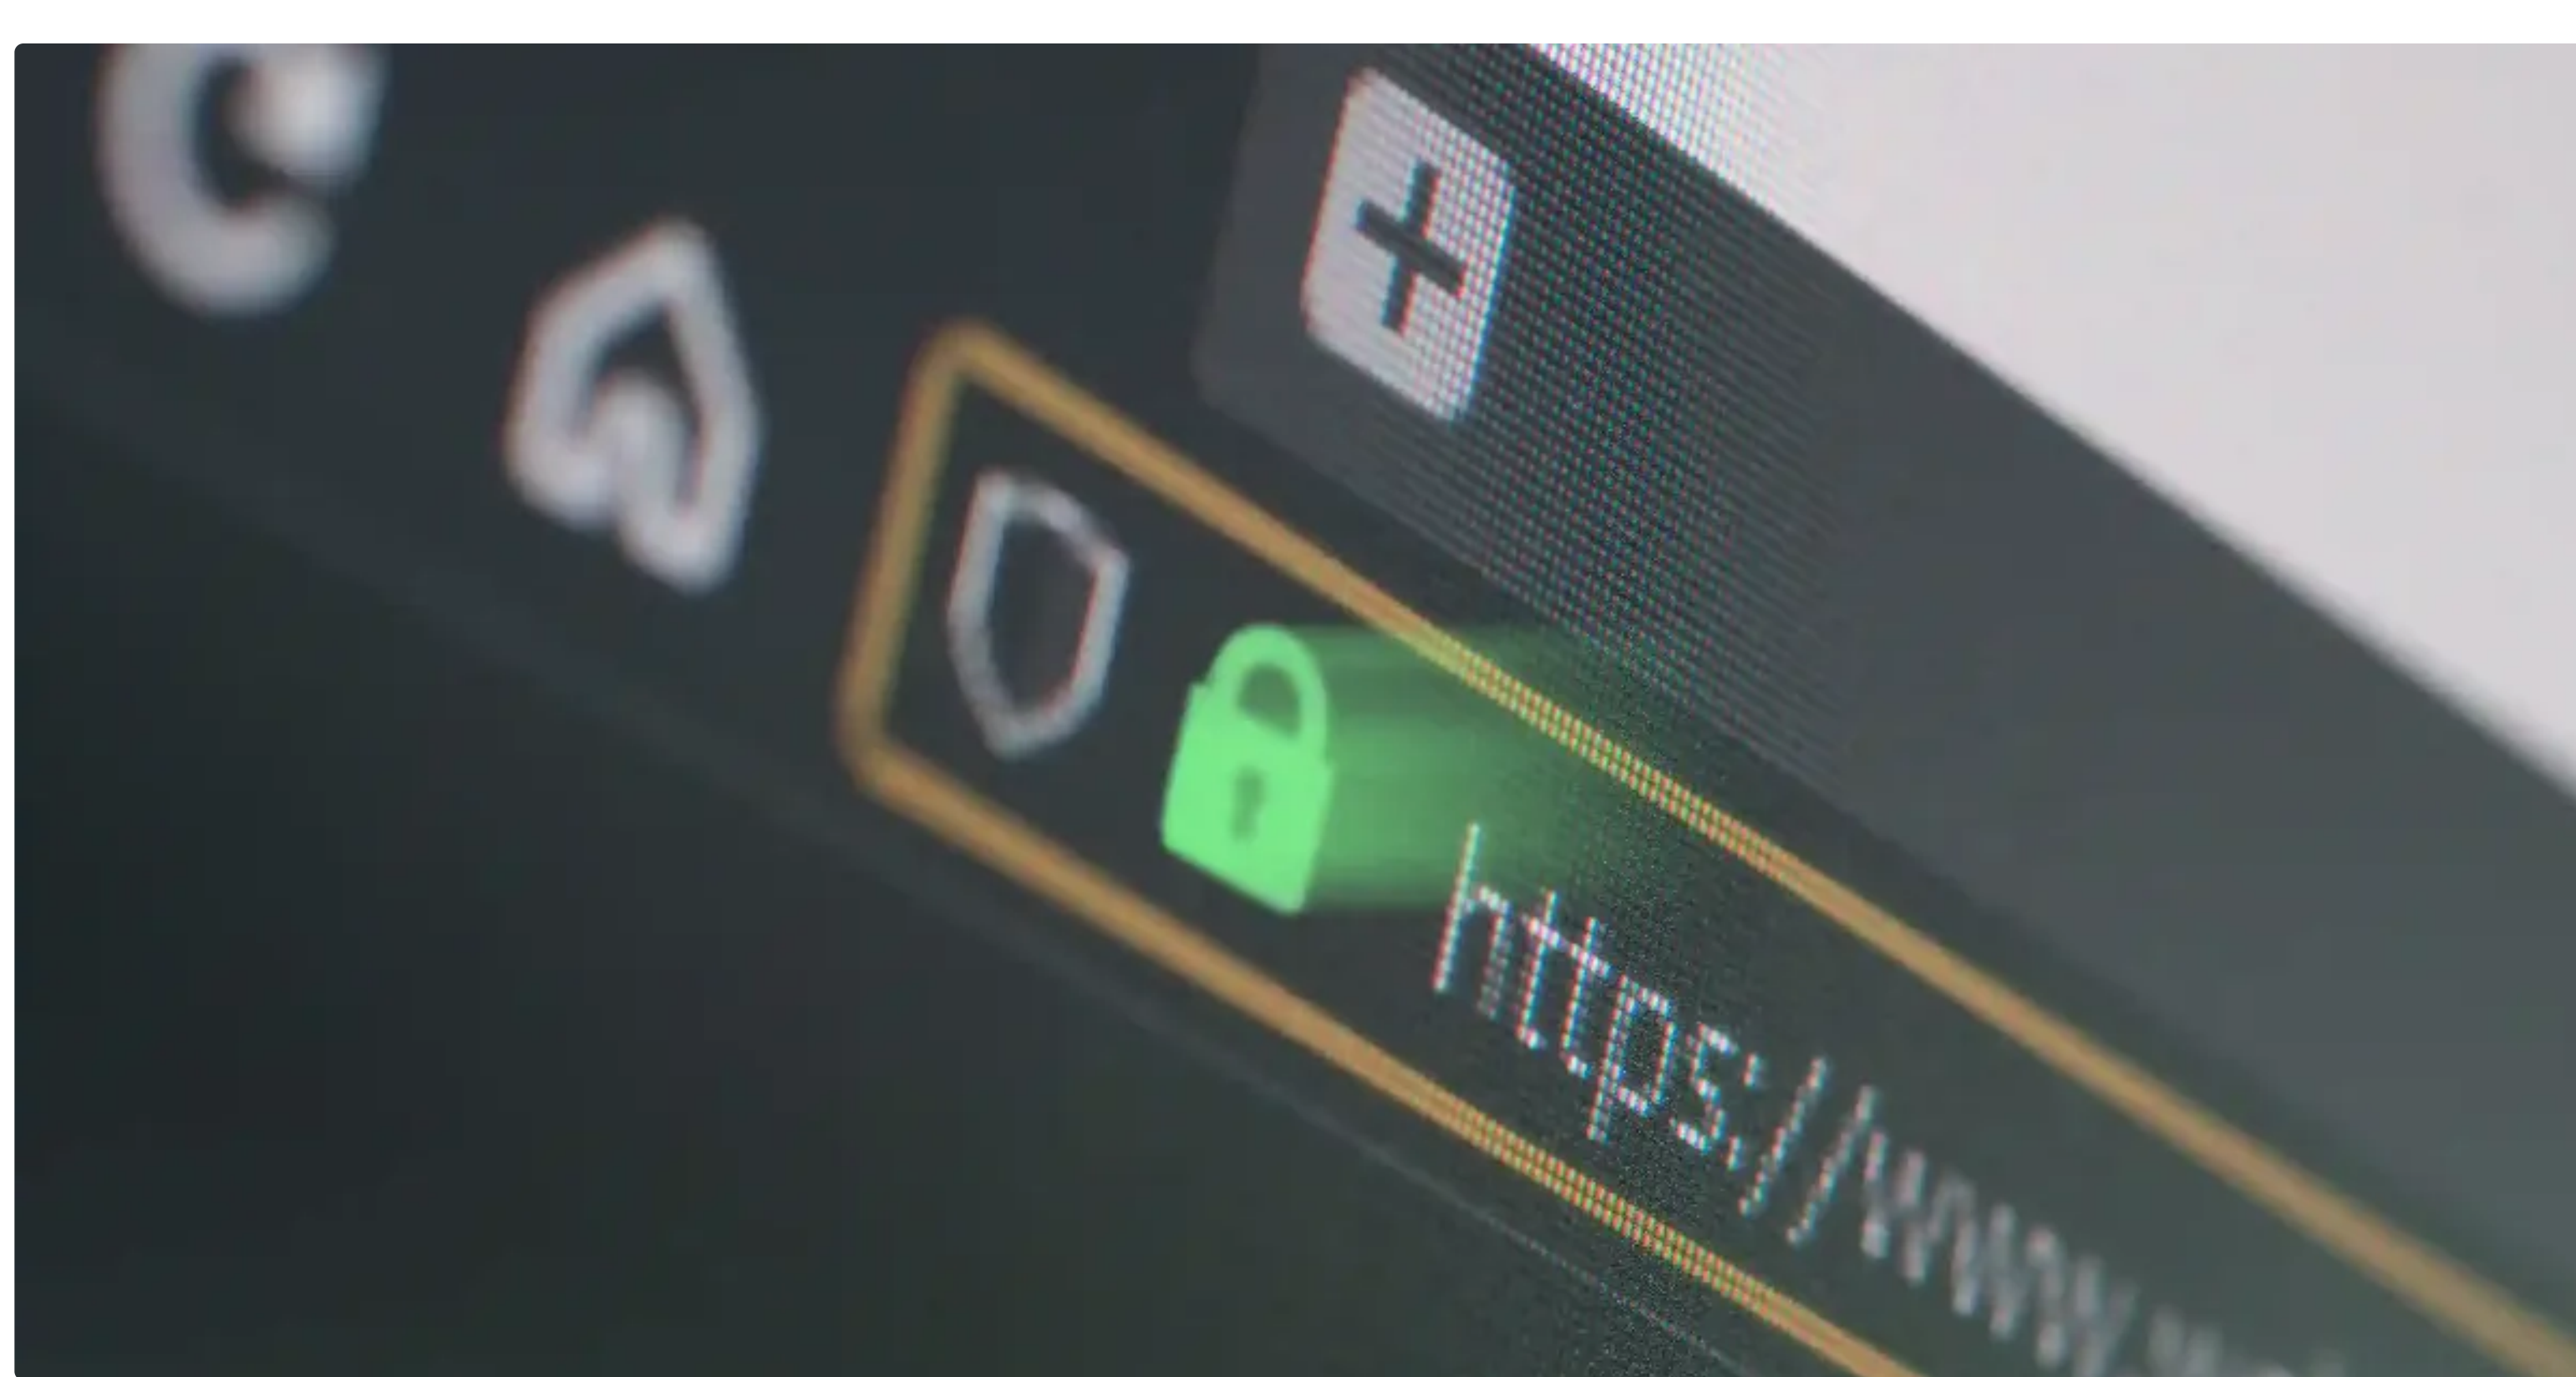

We won't be using text messaging because it's not secure and we don't want to risk it.

We plan to introduce this new feature for Shaumbra in October 2023. At first, it will be optional, so they can get used to it. Eventually, everyone will have to use it, like most Web applications nowadays.

Why does it have to be mandatory?

The PCI DSS rules will force everyone in the industry to use MFA. That's why you see more sites, like Amazon, eBay, and even newspapers, making it mandatory to log in with MFA.

Can you give other examples of things Shaumbra should watch for to make sure that they are shopping safely ANYWHERE online?

To check if a website is safe, you need to look for something called HTTP:// protocol in the website's address. If it is not there, or if the lock icon is broken or red, you should close the website quickly.

Another thing to check is the website's name in the address. If you see a "1" instead of an "l" or "0" instead of "o", it might be a fake website made by hackers. They like to use similar names like crims0nc1rcle.com.

Also, make sure there is nothing after the website's name like crimsoncircle.com.ducky.com.

The same applies to bank websites and other sites like Amazon, eBay, Mercado Libre, and many others.

Thank you for all this information and everything your team is doing to support our cyber security. We look forward to sharing more about this with Shaumbra very soon!

If you have any questions, please send us a note to customerservice@crimsoncircle.com

DEAR MASTER

LET'S TALK ABOUT CONTROL

Compiled by Carolina Oquendo

Q – Dear Master, you've always emphasized that allowing is the key to everything. It's been on my mind lately and I realized that it means letting go of everything, even things that I hold onto dearly like my identity. It seems that I must be willing to lose everything. Would you expand on that?

If you just stop for a moment and allow, like FM did in the last days of his life; like Tobias, my dear buddy, did in the last few days of his life. They reached a situation where all else had failed. They had nothing else. FM with the cancer; Tobias, rotting away in prison. And when you don't have anything else – you have nothing left to hold on to anymore, not even yourself, no body, no money, no family, no health, no nothing – well, it's pretty easy to allow then, and that's what they did.

And in that allowing, in the total letting go, getting out of the mind and stop trying to control and regulate everything and stop trying to figure out your way to heaven, he let go and he realized, "Oh, my God – which is me – oh, my God, it was there all along."¹

In simpler terms, does letting go, allowing, and even receiving mean giving up the control I've tried to have in my life? I realize that everything I do is motivated by a desire for some level of control, whether to achieve or avoid certain results, but am I not supposed to manage my life?

When you're trying to figure it all out, like you need to still be in control of everything, well, it's that very control and that very limited logic that's gotten you into the bind that you've felt yourself in, the limitations.²

This is not the time right now to be trying to manage or manipulate anything in your life.

You all know how to worry a lot and to fret. You all know how to try to control things. You all have had great battles within your mind and with other people, but now let's stop all that.

When you're feeling angry or even depressed, don't try to fight it or overcome it. Not at all. Just allow.³

So, if I'm still feeling that things are not flowing, if I still feel stuck in some areas of my life, does it mean that I haven't really allowed?

You think about allowing, (...), "Oh, I'm allowing. I'm just going to sit here and allow," but you're not. You're still holding on to all the stuff you were holding on before.

You're playing a game, and I'm going to call you on it. That's bullshit. And you know it and I know it, now we can laugh about it, right?

When you're constantly complaining and whining, you're out of alignment. So that's exactly what you're going to get.

Reality follows consciousness.

Reality follows even limited consciousness and beliefs. It'll create it for you, and that's what you get.⁴

You have the I Am, but you have the little me, the selfish human. I don't say that disparagingly. I don't say that negatively, but it's there, and it tends to try to take control. It whines enough and rebels enough and distorts you enough. You fall in. You become, in a way, a victim to little me.

No more. No more. No more.

Let's be mature I Am beings. No more selfish little human, bratty, insisting on its trivial little ways. You're the I Am, so start acting it.⁵

It seems like the only way to really let go is to keep observing me, every hour and every minute, instead of storing a problem in my indifference pocket, running from it, fighting with it or, even worse, criticizing myself for still being stuck with it. In other words, being constantly in touch with what I'm thinking. And then, eventually, the consciousness shifts. Is that enough?

You can't fight it. You cannot overcome your thoughts. You can "and."

You can go beyond, saying, "You know, okay, Adamus said that all my thoughts are crap and I'm going to go over here to the point where they're not. I don't need the self-judgment, the self-criticism."

Take a deep breath and "and" it.

You say, "Yeah, it's part of me. Wow! Amazing. Interesting. And I'm over here. I don't need that. It doesn't get me anywhere. That's just a part of me, an expression of me, but it's not all of me."⁶

When I've had glimpses of that AND you talk about, there's a part of me that gets paralyzed by fear, and I feel an internal recoil, as if I were tightening the reins, so to speak. What's up with that? I mean, how can I trust something that's out of control?

To change from a mental way of experiencing life into a sensual way is huge! It's frightening. Just think about it for a moment – or don't – suddenly, the mind isn't controlling. Suddenly, nothing's in control.

And on top of that, there's almost a fear of sensuality, meaning feeling, the ability to sense, the ability to feel something outside of the mind.⁷

There's a general fear of it, because in real sensuality there is no central control. The mind is not controlling it. The human's not controlling it. The Master is not controlling it. It is free flowing, as sensualness should be.

So there's a fear, "Who's controlling this? Where is it coming from? Is it a dark evil force? Am I ready for it? Can I handle it?" That's where you take that deep breath and you realize, "Here goes that mind again with all of its thing," and you come back to you. You come back to the "I Am, I Exist" and just let it happen. It's that allowing that I constantly talk about.⁸

Just take a deep breath and let go. And then watch what happens. (...) you come to the "I Am Here." You're just there. "I am beyond the need for self-control." Then you're there.⁹

It comes back naturally. There's not a thing you have to do. I just want you to sit here and behold what happens. That's all. Just observe it, behold it, but get out of the way.¹⁰

SHAUMBRA HEARTBEAT

AI Generated artwork by Marc Ritter

THIS IS IT

I have a vague feeling that something is wrong. Can't quite put my finger on it, but it's like I've forgotten something or missed a memo or fallen off the proverbial wagon. I haven't written in my journal for months. It's my 'go to' place for sorting out issues and problems and aspect hassles, but the last entry was many moons ago. My Fuck It Bucket stands empty and unused for weeks. Have I missed something? Am I falling back asleep? Has my consciousness stopped expanding? Am I just getting lazy? What's wrong with me?

Upon further inquiry, it turns out that these questions and doubts are coming from the ancient, doggedly persistent version of myself that was determined to get me... here. She's kept me going through thick and thin, dragging me back into biology after the most miserable lifetimes, nudging my return to the path after the most enjoyable diversions. Now she's at it again, looking for her next assignment, but it's just not coming – or I'm not listening – and she's feeling uneasy.

Me, on the other hand – the Me who's in charge of all these other parts and voices of my Self – is doing just fine. I'm not disturbed by the absence of the old familiar drive to constantly improve, dig through inner issues, pursue my aspects, understand reality, and fix the world and everyone in it. Those things have captivated me for ages, but now I'm losing interest. Not because they've lost their value, but because they are – dare I say – fulfilled.

AI Generated artwork by Marc Ritter

Now, this doesn't mean my days are without challenges, or that I never hurt or doubt or cry. It doesn't mean I sleep perfectly every night or that my car never needs repairs or that people around me are always wise and agreeable. But I have a different perspective, and therefore a different experience of all that. To be honest, I mostly don't care what's going on. Not because I'm indifferent, but because I know it all works out, and therefore doesn't really matter.

What does matter now? Well, life is rich and full and fun and highly sensory. After denying myself the deep pleasures of human life for way too long, now I indulge daily in the simple experiences of human existence. Twenty minutes with my morning coffee makes it worth getting out of my comfy bed. The morning light streaming in shares its beauty and highlights the dust I need to clean. The evening playdate with friends that finds me a wee bit sloshed and way too tired. A generous amount of time-squandering this weekend even though work deadlines are pressing in. The never finished 'to do' list that doesn't feel as heavy as it used to. I feel it all, but no longer as stuff to fix or change, simply sensual experience – which makes that stubbornly virtuous part of me uneasy. I mean, even the thesaurus offers "unspiritual" as a synonym for "sensual." (Really!!)

The point is, I'm enjoying life as it is. I'm in the flow, but it's a little different than I expected it would be. Sure, it's often smooth and peaceful, but I'm learning to enjoy the commotion too. If the flow is like a river, sometimes there are little eddies where I'm suddenly in a spin or even going backwards. Or there's nothing but turbulence and obstacles as far as I can see. But I know now, very deeply, that this river of my energy will always keep flowing. I don't need to fight the eddies or the rapids or the waterfalls, for none of it is wrong. It's all simply flowing.

Sure, we all still have rough days, weeks, months – heck, my last two articles were about things going wrong – so I wonder if it's even appropriate to write about how easy life is these days. Will my rambling be annoying instead of uplifting? But I believe this flow is how life was always meant to be, and the whitewater makes it fun and interesting! This is what we've been chasing for eons – an ease with our own energy so deep that we don't have to fight it anymore.

What happens then is a very subtle magic. Not the unrealistic whizbang tricks of manifesting a castle in the hills or the winning lottery numbers. No, it's a delicate alchemy where everything is in motion constantly realigning to serve me. Even when life is chaotic, messy, or painful, it's still in the never-ending process of working out just fine. For example, tax season is always busy season at Crimson Circle, so I usually file an extension to postpone the inevitable brain-numbing number crunching. It finally got done and the other day my CPA sent me a minor question about something. This prompted the discovery of a mistake that would have cost me $1000 because I forgot to write a "1" on the worksheet. I never would have found my error if she hadn't asked about something else, but these days everything insists on working out exactly right, even when my brain is completely mismanaging it.

What I really want to say is that this stuff we're doing is real. It works. All that's required is never giving up – on loving yourself, accepting yourself, trusting yourself no matter what – and sticking with it especially in the middle of an aspect storm. There IS a payoff, and you can remind the uneasy, judgy, doubtful and fearful parts of yourself to stand down. They've done their job and now you've made it. No more need for worry about getting something wrong.

That helpfully suspicious part of me is only an aspect to be accepted, but she doesn't get to run my life anymore. I can welcome her input and concern, but without believing her insistence on my looming failure. It's an opportunity to reassure her – and myself – that everything is working out just great. And isn't that the point of all this? Isn't the whole reason for being on Earth to get things flowing again? To stop struggling with energy, which is really just fighting with myself? I'm finally figuring out that nothing is actually wrong, no one needs to be fixed, and there have been no mistakes. All those notions are only resistance to my flow. In truth, it's all just an experience on this wild river of life. No need to control the flow or tame the river; I'm here to enjoy the ride.

So, I take another breath and revel in whatever life is offering in this moment, whether pain, pleasure, problems, or comfort. The old proverb says, "No man ever steps in the same river twice" and I will never live this moment again. Instead of trying to fix it, I'm going to thoroughly experience it.

This is it, what I've been striving for forever, and I don't want to miss a thing.
