The Games We Play

By Geoffrey Hoppe

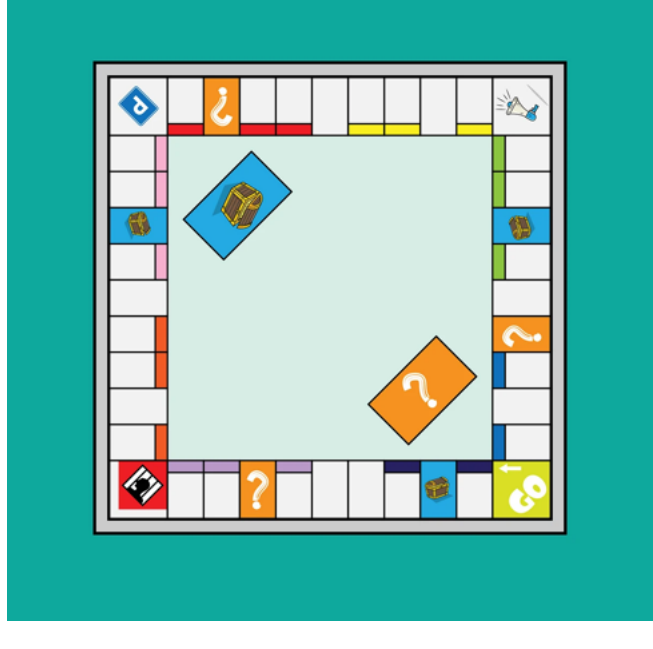

(CLICK ON PLAYER TO BEGIN LISTENING TO THE AUDIO VERSION OF THE ARTICLE)

I’ve been feeling off-kilter lately. Out-of-balance. Discombobulated. So, I did what Shaumbra does best: I repeatedly asked myself, “What’s Wrong With Me?” The WWWM game is easy to slip into and grueling to get out of. It can occupy massive amounts of time and psychic energy.

I think Shaumbra should invent a What’s Wrong with Me board game, similar to Monopoly but instead of traveling around the board in pursuit of real estate, it would be about acquiring issues, phobias and grave concerns. Instead of a “Go to Jail” square, we’d have a “See Adamus Now” space. You win the game when you take on everyone else’s problems.

I’ve tried a lot of self-diagnosis. It’s an essential part of the WWWM game. I start with the basics: Was it something I ate? Perhaps I absorbed someone’s bad energy at the hardware store? Maybe I haven’t been getting enough sleep? Oh, it’s probably that I’m dehydrated. I really should drink more water. But not tap water; that’s filled with carcinogens. It has to be pH balanced pure glacier water.

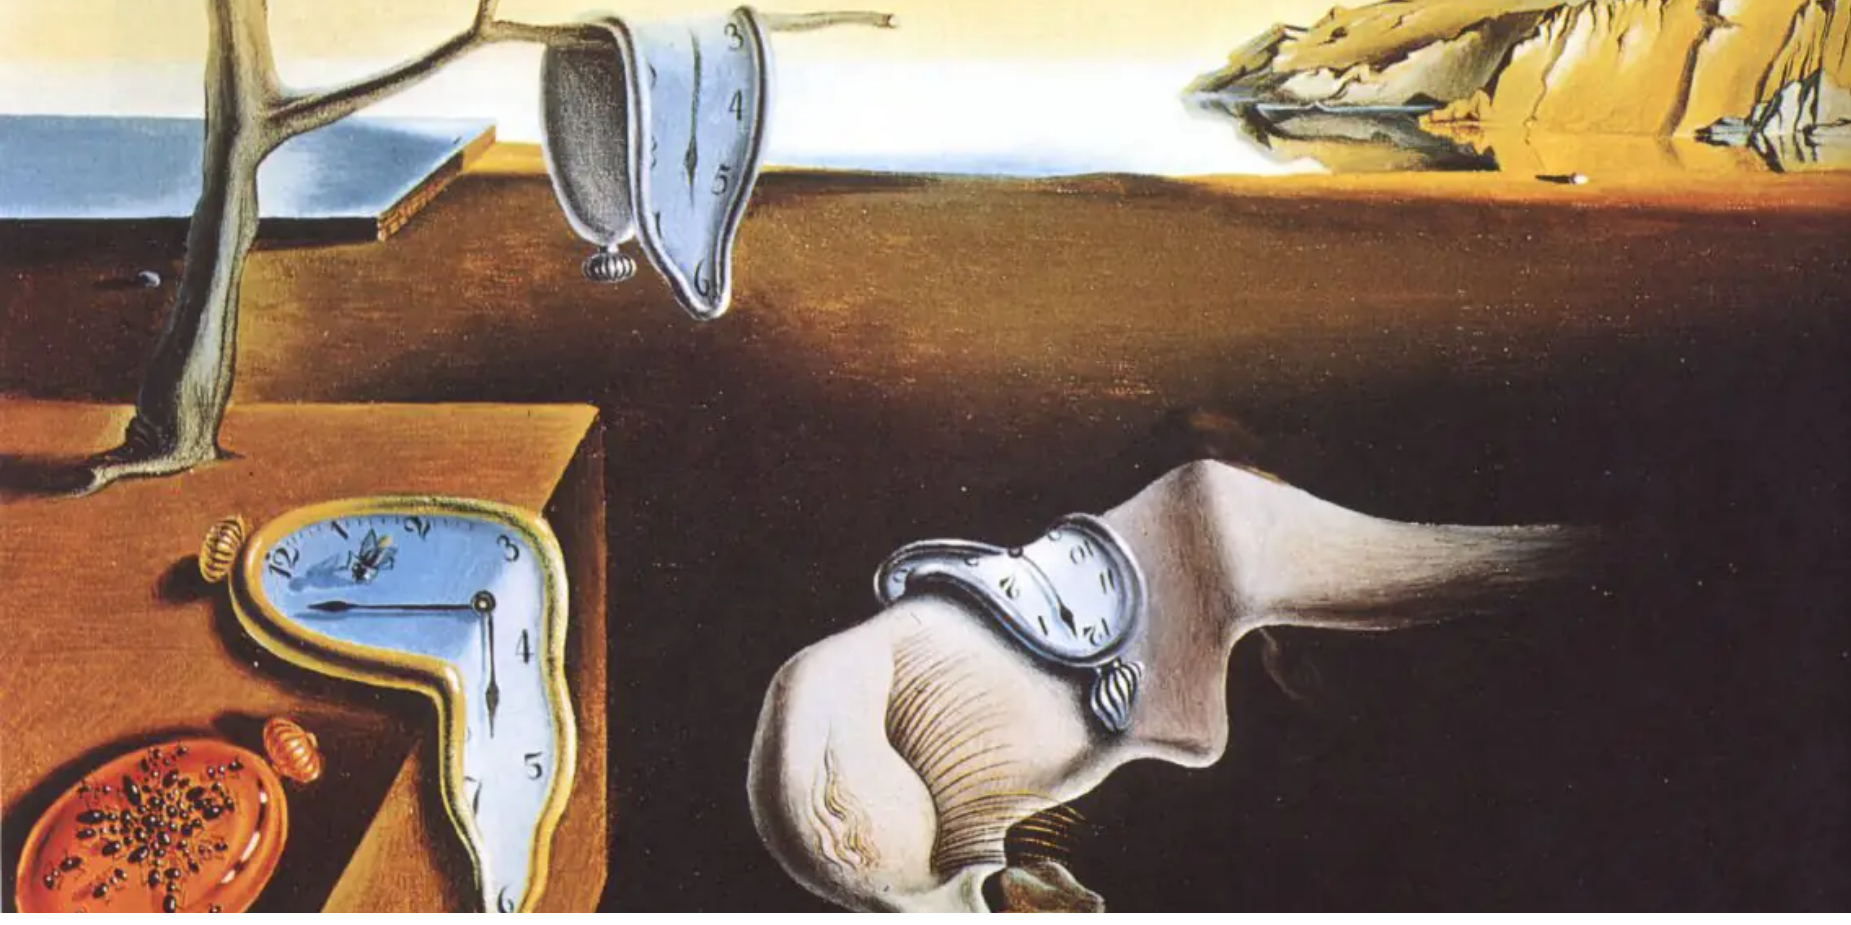

But the basics aren’t enough when playing WWWM. The mind gladly takes me to the next level of self-diagnosis. Maybe I’m losing my mind? After all, I’ve spent a total of 20 hours in the King’s Chamber in the Great Pyramid. Napoleon spent less than an hour there and is said to have had a mental breakdown. Maybe I have an incurable disease, or worse yet, a disease they don’t even know about yet?

Perhaps I’m at the early stages of Dissociative Identity Disorder? I’ve heard it’s common with channelers. My hands are a little shaky today. I either had too much coffee (duh) or I have Parkinson’s Disease. I often wonder what’s it like having a disease named after you? Did James Parkinson feel good about having Parkinson’s Disease named after him? I wonder if I have Hoppe’s Disorder, a rare condition that causes a person to ask themselves an excessive number of ludicrous questions without getting reasonable answers?

I finally decided it was time to see a doctor (sigh). I’m not big on going to the doctor but I was in enough of a quagmire that I felt it was my only way out. Many other Shaumbra go to this same doctor whether they know it or not: the infamous Dr. Agon. The Dr-agon. I chuckled to myself because the year 2024 is the year of the dragon. How sick. Sick... as in how young people mean sick these days: really good, cool, impressive. How sick is our youth that they say sick when it’s actually cool? Sick.

I sat in the good Dr.’s waiting room for at least 30 minutes, gazing at the bizarre paintings on the wall. Salvador Dali’s The Persistence of Memory, Hieronymus Bosch’s The Earthly Delights, and Edvard Munch’s The Scream, to name a few. Yep, these paintings pretty much captured how I was feeling.

Finally, a woman’s voice came out of nowhere: “Mr. Hope, the doctor will see you now.” People have always mispronounced my name but I liked the sound of Mr. Hope. I opened the door with a fiery dragon symbol etched in the wood and found myself in the doctor’s large office. The décor looked like something out of a steampunk movie The Adventures of Baron Munchausen. There were strange clocks as far as the eye could see, overstuffed green leather sofas and chairs, and odd art objects with turning gears.

Dr. Agon was standing next to a large light panel mounted on the wall, surrounded by retro-style radios, coiled antennas and spinning gauges. “Mr. Hope, come here please.” He had a thick Austrian accent and wore a long white laboratory coat over his shirt and tie. He wasn’t exactly a friendly guy; he never bothered to look up at me. “What is your problem today?”

“I’m feeling off. I’m just not myself the past few days. I think I might have...” Dr. Agon interrupted me mid-self-diagnosis and positioned me in front of the lighted panel. “Here, drink this,” he said as he handed me a large glass. “What’s in here?” I inquired. “Water. You’re dehydrated.” Ha! I knew it all along.

“Now stand still while I activate my Assistive Energy Detection device,” he said in a grumpy voice. The Doctor pushed a few buttons and the panel came to colorful life. The gauges literally started to blow out steam. The radio contraptions made static noises. I was facing the light panel and was nearly blinded by the intense shifting colors. My pants started to cling to my legs from the electro-magnetic charges, while also making my hair stand on end. This went on for about five long minutes until Dr. Agon pulled a large brass lever, causing everything to start winding down. The Doctor pushed another button on his large console and suddenly a dozen or more sheets of paper came off a printer. He reached over for the papers – apparently my diagnosis – and sat down in his lab chair.

“Hmmmm, ummm, humpt,” came from the Doctor. I didn’t like the sound of it. I bet I have an incurable disease. Or maybe I’m constipated due to dehydration? One way or the other, his grunts and groans didn’t make me feel better.

“Have you been Allowing lately?” he asked while taking off his reading glasses and finally looking up at me. “Yes, I’ve been doing a tremendous amount of Allowing lately,” I answered. “Adamus Saint-Germain – I’m sure you know of him – insists that all Shaumbra Allow. I Allow every night before I go to sleep, and every time I get in a bind.”

“Have you been Allowing more than usual lately?” His question felt very accusatory, like I had been drinking excessive amounts of wine, or practicing Aliyah too much. “Well,” I said in a guilty voice, “I’ve had an incredibly busy schedule in January. Shouds, Keahak, Cloud Classes, interviews, filming the new Love 2.0, and then a very intense in-person Managers meeting. I’ve pushed myself to the limit. I’ve had to do lots of Allowing just to stay standing.”

I could tell the Doctor didn’t care about my busy schedule. He wasn’t going to prescribe a bottle of Po-Mee nor Fuckitall. “Look here at these charts,” he said while pounding his fingers on the charts. “It’s all right here!” I looked down at the many sheets of paper. They were filled with symbols, patterns and wavy lines, but no words. I had no clue what it meant.

“Right here,” he said while impatiently tapping on the paper. “It’s your Aerotheon Zone.” I thought he said Erogenous Zone until I remembered Adamus’ new word, Aerotheon. It means gravity that is both contracting and expanding. The chart showed strong colored lines flowing into a prism but very weak, gray lines flowing out. “Is this serious, Doc? Am I going to live?”

Dr. Agon settled back in his chair as a grin appeared on his wise face. “My good man, here’s your problem,” he said as he highlighted the area in question. “You’ve Allowed a tremendous amount of light into your Self, but now it’s trapped in this crystalline structure of your body/mind/spirit.” In that moment I panicked. It sounded like Adamus’ story of getting trapped in a crystal for 100,000 years. I didn’t want to be stuck in a crystal prison, much less for near-eternity.

The Doctor continued. “Yes, yes, it’s a good thing to Allow your light, but you also have to let it flow in and through you. You’re letting the gravity hold it in. It needs to flow in, and it needs to flow out. Gravity holds things in, and it also expands things. That’s what Aerotheon is all about. You just need to let the other side of gravity work for you. Don’t just be a Downer; be an Upper as well.”

So, I wasn’t going to die after all. So much for self-diagnosis. And yes, I was constipated but just with my own light. “So, how do I let my light expand?” I asked.

“Do reverse Allowing,” Doc answered.

“You mean I shouldn’t Allow, and that I should Oppose?”

“No, you should Allow your light to go into the other side of gravity. You’ve Allowed gravity to bring it into focus, but now you need to Allow the other side of gravity to Expand your light. Right now, it’s all balled up inside you, making you feel sluggish and disoriented. Your overall Light Level is excellent, but now you have to open up. It’s a wonder you’re still standing with this mass of backed up light.” The Doctor wrote some notes on the charts. One of the scribbles looked like a smiley face ☺ but my eyes still hadn’t adjusted from the bright panel lights.

“How do I Allow this, ah, omnidirectional Allowing?” I questioned.

Dr. Agon raised one eyebrow as he looked at me. “You obviously have issues with allowing Allowing. I’m going to refer you to a specialist.” He scribbled a few notes on the back of his business card and handed it to me. It took a moment for my eyes to adjust, but I was finally able to read it:

Mahatma Koot Hoomi, aka Kuthumi

GEOFFREY HOPPE

Geoffrey Hoppe founded the Crimson Circle in 1999 after a series of conversations with the angelic being known as Tobias. He left the corporate world in 2001 to devote his full time to the Crimson Circle, along with his wife Linda. Geoff channeled Tobias until 2009 when Tobias returned to earth in a new incarnation known as Sam. Tobias handed off his guidance role with the Crimson Circle to Adamus Saint-Germain, a facet of the Beloved St. Germain who has been working with humans for hundreds of years. Geoff has been the messenger of Adamus Saint-Germain ever since.

THE LAWS ARE NOT YOURS

RELEASING THE GRAVITY MAGNETS

For the last 10 years ProGnost has been Adamus’ highly anticipated bi-annual look at what he considers to be the most important trends and dynamics on Planet Earth.

In this important presentation, he takes a look at laws, calling them gravity magnets and inviting Shaumbra to let them go. However, when he says, “The laws are not yours,” he’s talking about the laws of nature, religion, community and – most importantly – the laws of self.

Rather than a call to fight and resist all these laws, Adamus gives a strong invitation to simply release them, particularly those we have internalized. The gravity of these laws makes it difficult for our light to shine but letting them go brings sensuality and freedom.

ProGnost 2024 is an inspiring call to embrace your personal sovereignty and shine your light.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Laws and rules attract gravity
- Laws of nature are correct but incomplete
- The laws of religion are the darkest of all
- Social laws are meant for cooperation, not control
- Self laws are the most complex and contradictory
- Release the laws to go beyond density and gravity

WE LOVE OUR ANGELS!

FIND OUT MORE ABOUT THE CC ANGELS HERE

February is the traditional Month of Love, centered around St. Valentine's Day on February 14. We've also designated it as the CC Angels Month because we love our Angels! The CC Angels around the world are the core of the Shaumbra energy. They quietly support the Crimson Circle activities with their financial contributions, and their energy support provides a solid and consistent base for everything we do as a global organization.

HOW IT GOT STARTED

As the Crimson Circle was growing by leaps and bounds back in 2009, we had many Shaumbra asking how they could make donations to the work. They noted that they were getting so much from the Tobias channelings and other free Crimson Circle services that they wanted to offer an energy exchange.

We never intended to be a donation-based organization but we knew we had to create a way for generous Shaumbra to offer their financial support. That's when we created the CC Angel program, making it easy for Shaumbra to make monthly donations of $22, $44 or $99. Within a few months of launching the idea we had over 250 CC Angels.

We rarely mention the program because we've always felt there should have a natural, unforced energy behind it. Today there are over 1000 CC Angels around the world.

HOW IT HELPS

The CC Angel donations help us offer a wide variety of services to Shaumbra that wouldn't be possible if we relied only on workshop and Cloud Class sales.

Because of the CC Angels, we're able to do free monthly webcasts, the free monthly Shaumbra Magazine, provide prompt and personal Customer Service, maintain a huge enterprise-level website, offer hundreds of free products, thousands of translations, and much more.

WHAT YOU MIGHT NOT KNOW

Here are a few facts about Crimson Circle you might not be aware of:

- Our server costs for the website and other technical needs are over $35,000 every month.
- Our worldwide team includes 35 full-time employees, contractors and permanent part-time staff members
- The main library of over 290 monthly Shouds has always been offered free of charge, as well as many other messages and a wide array of services.
- Less than 6% of Shaumbra have ever made a purchase; 94% use only the free webcasts and products.
- Geoff and Linda Hoppe are the sole owners of the Crimson Circle company. When they leave the planet, all of their personal assets will be inherited by the Crimson Circle so the company can continue well into the future.

WHAT ADAMUS HAS TO SAY ABOUT THE CC ANGELS

(Excerpted from Adamus' message to the CC Angels on December 12, 2023)

This organization has to include the energy coming from you, the Angels. It could not do what it's doing if it was just a regular company, if there weren't people like the Angels making donations. It's got to be the combined energies to stay in balance.

If it was just all donations, it wouldn't have the energy dynamics that it does now. If it was a nonprofit organization relying exclusively on donations, it would be subject to the old energy of begging, pleading, or oftentimes, of laying guilt on people to try to get them to donate.

The Crimson Circle is a true hybrid, and that's why it works. Your support allows this organization to put forth things for the new people; for the ones who right now can't afford it; for the ones who are searching for answers right now, but they haven't found what they're looking for quite yet.

This is truly a conscious company, a New Energy company, because it is not bottom-line oriented. It wouldn't work if it was. It wouldn't work if there were those who were simply making money off of it. It's got to be in service to Shaumbra. Then it works.

INSPIRING CONSCIOUSNESS

Interview with Michael Sandler
Founder of Inspire Nation
Podcast Talk Show

SHAUMBRA MAGAZINE: What caused you to create the Inspire Nation YouTube channel?

MICHAEL SANDLER: Ehhh ... crickets! My wife and I had been wiped out on Maui. She was sick with mold toxicity poisoning. I had had my second near-death experience and a second accident while I was healing. And so, we were catapulted off of Maui from a dream home to my wife's childhood bedroom, an eight by ten room with two twin mattresses on the floor. And there I was, asking Spirit what I was supposed to do, and I just started doing automatic writing. That was very helpful. I was also taking walks on a feeder highway to New York City, and on one side of the road was the highway, on the other side were trees with crickets. In addition to the automatic writing, I spoke with the crickets and that's where I heard, "You know, you really loved when you were on Maui interviewing people for a mindful running program. You love doing interviews, so you get to start a show." I wondered "Well, what is this show about?" and Inspire Nation came from there. So, automatic writing and the crickets.

SM: That's so great! What is the purpose of your show? And who is your audience?

MICHAEL: The purpose of the show, I've always said it's about raising people's vibration, elevating consciousness, shifting humanity. On a more functional level, it's waking people up to who and what they are and their connection to Spirit, their connection to the divine, and that they are the divine. The world right now will knock you down and tell you why you must be afraid and that everything is going to hell in a handbasket. The world will also tell you that you are not special, that you are less than – whatever that means – and our show is here to give you the truth, the alternate reality of just how amazing and great you truly are.

Our audience is people who have woken up to the fact that there is something more out there. We can call these people empaths or extra sensitive. I call them mystics in latency. It's those who have taken a step down the path or are irritated by the energy around them going, "There's got to be something more," and they find their way to our show.

It has been a slightly older and slightly more female demographic. That has been changing lately as the world is experiencing what I call "drunk tree syndrome." Which means that the alcoholic will never change until either they've lost their partner, or they hit a tree. Humanity right now is collectively hitting the tree because we haven't changed. That's drunk tree syndrome, and it's not a bad thing, even though it appears horrific on the surface. It is the time where we're all waking up, at least that we've got to do things differently.

SM: How has your audience grown over the years?

MICHAEL: When it started out in 2015, we were so excited when we got to 100, then 1,000. Now, at this point our audience is about half a million. How does it get any better than this? I mean, we've got thousands of people in classes worldwide, hundreds of thousands watching our shows, and our biggest shows have over a million. So, it's quite special, always morphing and changing as we grow and as the world is constantly amoeba-ing to this new reality.

SM: You have some very interesting guests on your show. How do you select them?

MICHAEL: It's an alchemy based on a few key considerations. One, is the guests need to have passion. They need to both excitement and interest in their topic and something that will rub off on our audience. Because if it's somebody who's speaks like this (dull, drone-like voice) and wants to talk about equanimity, there's nowhere I could go with them! They must be somebody who is shifting humanity, who is raising consciousness. And it has to be something that I personally am excited about.

SM: You interviewed Geoffrey Hoppe recently. How did that go?

MICHAEL: Geoff is a mountain. It was like speaking with a mountain. He is centered. He is grounded. He has very important messages to share. He shares a little bit of a trickster coyote energy of the universe, and that's when you know somebody is very plugged in. But he is not the – "Oh, let's talk about spirituality up here! We're all fine. We're trying to be outside of our bodies!" He's very, very grounded.

SM: How did you come across Crimson Circle?

MICHAEL: It was through Mike Dooley, who is a dear, dear friend. He said, "I had a course on Awakening a year or two ago, and Geoffrey Hoppe was one of my favorites. You've got to interview him." And where Mike Dooley says yes, I go.

SM: Usually, Geoff doesn't like to channel Adamus on the first interview with someone. But he says you talked him into it. How did that go?

MICHAEL: In this lifetime I have never met Adamus before, but according to him I was apparently a disciple of his in many past lifetimes. So that was fascinating. I am very intuitive, and I plug in before each show, and I had to ask for Adamus to be on! And it was brilliant. It flowed perfectly. And according to both Adamus and Geoff afterwards, it was meant to be. So, I loved the experience. I remember feeling, "Why do I want to call you Master? This is weird!" It was very, very cool, and very fun. And I know who I am and what I am, so hearing special words from Adamus just reaffirms where I am on my path.

SM: What are some of the most important things you've learned from your guests?

MICHAEL: That is an exceptionally hard question to answer, because I've had over 2,000 guests and during an interview I am just in the stream of consciousness. I'm present with a guest and have no idea what they said a minute ago, because I'm focused on what they're saying now. So, the best thing I can do is share some "Michaelisms" from a new book we're working on.

SM: Perfect.

MICHAEL: The one that hasn't made it into the book yet is "Language is not my first language." This is something I discuss with my wife all the time, particularly because I got bopped in the head a couple of years ago by a car. So, when I'm speaking like this with you, I find words easily. When I'm not in this state, I have real trouble finding words. A lot of stuff is gibberish. Everything is about the energy, about the frequency that we bring. Everything is about what we are doing to play with, move with, alchemize the energies that are all around us. So, if we understand that and don't get caught up in the world and the trauma or drama going on around us, we can shift our energy and then project out new and a higher-level energy into the universe. So that's one key thing.

Another expression is: "How does it get any better than this?" It means that no matter what is going on in your life, no matter what has just taken place, it's all perfect. It's all planned. It's all good. It's all God. It's all here to serve you. And that means, of course – the line that's totally cliché and true at the same time – "Everything is happening through you and for you, not to you." It's all here to serve you. You are the divine. You are love. You are the magnificent. You are the creator. You are not the whole of the creator, but in this holographic universe, you have all of the creator and all of the universe, and the universe is within you. What do we want to project into this reality? Let's rock this reality with everything we've got.

"Gentle is the new strong." Or as I heard from a guest yesterday, "Sensitivity is your superpower." Now, while I say Geoffrey is a mountain, I'm not saying he's trying to conquer the place. The mountain doesn't need to conquer anything. We do not need to fight, to drive, to push. It is balance. It is not going to back to the time of the divine feminine. The divine feminine is past. The divine masculine, thank God, is over! This is a time of a very balanced approach. So "sensitive is the new strong" means we feel the energies. We go into the heart. We use these together. What a magnificent tool. But we do not try to drive and strive with this.

And "We put our oxygen mask on first." We don't try to change the outer world and go grab our picket thing and go on the streets when we haven't worked on what's going on inside. This is where the biggest difference is going to come from, which means now is the time of shadow work, of leaning into all of the gunk and junk that's beneath the surface, that is now coming back up in order to be healed. It's kind of a "holy crap" moment, and it's here to serve you.

SM: What message would you like to give to our Shaumbra audience?

MICHAEL: You are love. You are magnificent. You are divine, and you are perfect just as you are. Let's use some strong language. You don't need to change a damn thing. Lean into yourself. Lean into life. Lean into all of it and love yourself up and hug yourself up with everything you've got. And how does it get to be better than this? How does it get any better than this? That's what I would say.

SM: Beautiful. Perfect. Thank you.

MICHAEL: You're most welcome.

THE MASTER CODE ONLINE

Your Destiny, Your Fulfillment, Your Creation

MARCH 16–17, 2024

HOSTED LIVE BY GEOFFREY AND LINDA HOPPE

“A PROFOUND, HISTORY-ALTERING, REALITY-SHIFTING EXPERIENCE.”

There is a destiny that has brought you forward lifetime after lifetime. It was The Way, the path forward that was coded in Atlantis and based on a foundation of guilt and remorse. The mind, locked into its own coding for eons, will finally rejoice as the light of your own soul releases the old, tightly fused energies of the Atlantean Code.

Now it is time for a new Code, The Way of the Master, accompanied by your greatest gift to humanity, the Ascension Code. This is why you’re here.

In The Master Code, Adamus shares the poignant story of an important event near the end of Atlantis. Those who had worked with the headbands saw the pain and destruction they were causing and, filled with remorse, eventually created a mystical community and the Temples of Tien. The coding that was done then – filled with regret, shame, passion, and hope – created the path we have followed ever since.

It’s time now for a new code, to live as a Magi in freedom, ease, grace, and abundance.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Everything is coded; it’s like the software of reality
- Your reality can now be coded consciously
- The Way – the Atlantean code that brought you here
- You made it; your coded destiny has been fulfilled
- The Ascension Code – your greatest gift to humanity
- The Master Code – a profound gift to yourself

GO WITH YOUR FEARS

By Patricia Eberlin

It is December 24th, I am getting ready for Christmas Eve, having my family coming at 6:30pm. Around 2pm, with everything under control and timed to perfection, I savor a moment's pause. Suddenly I feel nauseous and dizzy, so much that I have to lie down on the sofa. The dizziness gets worse, so does the unease, and my human starts to freak out. Heart attack? Stroke? Immediately the worst with the Human, of course, while my inner Merlin remains calm, which reassures me.

OK, it's nothing serious, but then what is it? I feel a non-verbal response that could be translated as "something New that's impossible to define at the moment." I take it. I ask the human to shut up please, and I observe. Suddenly I feel cold inside my bones. I tell myself I've got plenty of time before the guests arrive, so I'm going to curl up under the duvet in my bed.

I experience a very strange moment, uncomfortable in something unknown. It's not really pain, more a quantum quirk that destabilizes me because I can't identify it. Then the Human starts again. Maybe I'm dying? Oh nooooo, that would be silly, on Christmas Eve. I figure my door is not locked so they won't have to break it down, but all the same, what a strange surprise for my family to find me dead in my bed, especially today! At the same time, I think that if this is what dying is, it's perfectly acceptable. It's not scary, I'm just intrigued by what's happening to me. The more I accept the situation, the less painful it becomes.

To the side, Merlin is patient, waiting to be asked his opinion. When I do, he assures me that I'm not dying, but that I'm experiencing "some cosmic stuff." Plus, I'm just remembering my firm intention to explore the planet as an embodied Master for a few centuries if all goes well, so NO, definitely not, I'm not dying tonight!

I take a deep breath, let go of all my fears and enjoy the experience. It's psychedelic; I see fractals that make me nicely dizzy. Images scroll across my inner screen in a jumble, with no apparent cohesion, no meaning. I let it happen, it's rather amusing. At one point, I hear myself thinking that "I'm on another planet." I'm extremely lucid and present in my physical body, I feel the duvet on my skin, the warmth of the mattress in my back, and I 'feel' the new planet without visualizing it. It's a kind of milky white fog, and yet I'm capturing a whole world in this strange chantilly. It's as intense as riding a rollercoaster, and since I've let go of the fear, it's just as exciting! A sensual ride impossible to translate into words, I live it fully and observe myself from my bed. Flabbergasting!

And then I fall asleep. When I wake up, it seems like this has been going on for hours. I'm about to get agitated to finish preparing for Christmas Eve dinner, but no, barely an hour has gone by. I'm as fresh as if I'd had a good baby sleep, perfectly back and aligned. I'm almost doubting the intensity of what I've just experienced, so much so that I'm back to "normal." If I had to describe what I've just experienced, I'd probably say it was a little trip to another dimension through Heaven Cross.

We had a lovely Christmas Eve with my family, and a few days later I felt a small toothache. It's a small infection that my dentist detected a little while ago and explained to me that he wasn't going to do anything for the moment because it's already on a root canal and treating it would mean a major, possibly catastrophic, dental project. All I have to do is keep an eye on it. So I begin to treat it as usual, half with traditional medicines, half with witch's potions, while keeping a close eye on the pain to make sure it doesn't get any worse. It's not very strong, but it's still there after two days. The Human gets back to it: "You're craaaazy! You've GOT to go to the emergency room, an infection in the skull is no small thing. You're going to hurt, you're going to suffer, you've got to do something!" I reply that dental emergencies on a Sunday, 31st of December are just too much drama and inconvenience. We're just not doing that. NO WAY!

I am done with suffering in my life. I've had too much already in this lifetime, so even a little pain has become intolerable. I call upon Merlin with all my being and also Adamus, Kuthumi and all those who wish to respond to my SOS. I need an instant healing 2.0. I call my light body and ask that it takes its place in my biology. If ever there was a time to do this, it's now! At that moment, I see a hand holding a sphere of sacred geometry, like a flower of life, kind of a galactic tool in violet fluorescent light that moves towards my cheek near the infected tooth. The pain subsides immediately. I keep the visualization to welcome my light body and ask it to create a network of light to drain the infection. It works quite well but the worry persists: the gravity of the human biology programming is firmly resisting this New One.

Adamus reminds me that these are all my energies, and they serve me. I switch my thinking: infection, pain, it's all serving me! For what? No idea, and it doesn't matter. If I accept that it's serving me, then where does it lead me? Instant relief. I'm no longer fighting an infection; I'm welcoming it and observing what it's doing for me. Then I hear my biology telling me: "You see, it's working! You wanted magical healing, you're being served. What you call pain is the sensation of the new circulation of energy in your teeth. The infection is going away, you can feel it pass. Trust the process, it is renovation."

I took some paracetamol for a few more days just to reassure the human who couldn't be reassured any other way. Every time I forgot to consider the New, the anxious pain — or painful anxiety — returned. As long as I maintained the vision of my light body at work installing a new system, my biology was more fluid and the physical discomfort became pleasant, validating the presence of the New within. In the past, when I imagined our prophesied magical healing abilities, I thought of a magical wand's touch that instantly transformed an aging body into regenerated youth. Poof, hocus pocus, get up and walk! I have to admit that it's much more fun this way, experiencing every moment of the transformation.

I find that the hardest part of all this is keeping the mind at bay, ignoring what has been known since the dawn of time to listen to the inner voice and follow the path of the New Energy. And because it's NEW, there's nothing to compare it to, no reference, no security, just the New to adjust to. The trick is to move forward – complete with a sense of imbalance, nausea, and dizziness – and simply go for it. And, most important, not trying to control anything, just riding the wave.

I'm picturing the big slides at water parks. One knows they're designed to prevent accidents, but it's still scary! But if you try to control your speed or your course once you've started, it's guaranteed to leave you bruised and sore, and with zero fun! I understand that from now on, I need to experience the New Energy like one of those toboggans: dare to fully live it, take my fears by the hand for the quantum leap, completely let go of control and scream with pleasure! I also understand that there won't be the same slide twice, so I'll just discover and enjoy each slide to the full.

PROGNOST 2024 – THE LAWS ARE NOT YOURS

Releasing the Gravity Magnets

Cost: $100
Format: Streaming video and online text e-reader
Access: 90 days (120 days for CC Angels)

This is a timely look at the ancient, evolving and gravity-ridden nature of laws, particularly as they affect personal sovereignty. New laws are written every day, adding weight, gravity, and density to the planet, and squeezing out creativity and magic. But it's time to go beyond them because, as Adamus says, “A true Master has no rules.”

However, when he says, “The laws are not yours,” Adamus is talking about the laws of nature, religion, community and, most importantly, the inner laws of self. Rather than fighting and resisting all these rules, we can simply let them go. This is particularly important for the ones we have internalized because laws attract gravity, and these inner limitations make it difficult for our light to shine. It's time for us to allow The Natural Way, and bring our light, sensuality, and freedom to ourselves and to the world.

MASTER'S LIFE 16 – RETURNING TO GRACE

And Staying There

Cost: $150 (through March 5, 2024; $195 thereafter)
Format: Streaming audio, video and online text e-reader
Access: 90 days (120 days for CC Angels)

Grace means “to gather or bring together” and is one of the greatest ways to experience human life. It is always here, but most humans do not experience grace because of our inherent sense of guilt and shame, and the belief that we are fallen angels deserving of punishment and suffering. When we accept that there was never a fall from grace, we'll no longer have the pain, struggle, and suffering that stems from feeling unworthy. Life becomes smooth and easy, and everything begins to flow in its natural graceful way.

The lack of grace in our human experience comes from fear and a deep sense of separation, but it was simply how we experienced the expansion of consciousness from oneness into many. Accepting the truth of who you are, embracing the experiences of human life, choosing your own safe space, and letting go of compromise allows the integration of yourself in all the realms, which brings back the grace and ease into your life.

RECEIVING INVISIBLE PERFECTION

By Kemila Zsange

In a previous article, I wrote about falling off a 4-foot-high parking lot cliff wall on Mauna Kea, Hawaii in the pitch darkness of the night. After it happened, though stargazing became an unfinished business, I was feeling fine. On the drive back I was even engaged in a meaningful deep conversation with our B&B host, my new friend Scott. It was not until the next morning that I started to feel a soreness on my inner right knee, even though it was the left side of the body that fell onto the concrete ground.

To rule out any broken bones, my partner and I decided to go to Kona Community Hospital emergency room. While he was doing the driving, I activated my phone roaming service and called my credit card medical insurance to start a claim with them.

The hospital took my information and gave me a number for my insurance company. It was all a new experience for me, both dealing with a hospital and dealing with travel insurance. I figured I'd just do as instructed step by step.

Flying back to Canada, I continued on those steps, filling out the forms, mailing in the documents, responding to the hospital's two bills: one from ER and one from the main doctor's office. I spent about two hours in the hospital, mainly in the waiting room. There was an X-ray but no treatment, as I didn't have any broken bones, but the bills were thousands of dollars each. It is what it is. The process was very dry and time consuming. There was an old habit of inner resistance and complaint coming up about the "unnecessary" complication of what should be simple matters, but this time it just couldn't come fully up and take over. Instead, an inner quiet space got steadily quieter these days. I knew that I knew better, didn't I?

It was like the Master self just didn't want to go into the drama story anymore. Enough of that has been done. Now I keep myself present doing what I do as I'm doing it, so I don't do what I don't do when I'm not doing it. If I can quote Jean Tinder, it would be, "My recipe for life's perfection? Receive everything as it is, participate as needed, and watch it unfold."

What unfolded next was that I received a mail from the insurance company asking me to submit yet another document – the proof of travel purchased.

Sure, no problem. I looked through my old emails to find the e-tickets, but they weren't there. I traced back through credit card statements month by month... Nope. The proof was nowhere to be found.

But I did pay for the flight, didn't I?

Further digging revealed the mystery. It turned out I paid for that trip with an airline Mastercard, the only time that I ever did so in the history of my existence. I had applied for that card 10 months earlier for something else that never happened. And I always used my Visa card for traveling, for its points and particularly for its travel insurance. But the only time the insurance need arose was the one time I didn't charge it to that card.

Wait, doesn't the Mastercard give me travel insurance too? Oh, must I start all over again? The thought of that was quite unpleasant. But when I looked into the fine print of the insurance certificate, I realized I couldn't do it even if I wanted to. While going through the long process of the paperwork with the Visa insurance, I had lost the window of time to file a claim with the Mastercard insurance.

Everything that could go wrong had gone wrong. Or so it seemed. I couldn't wrap my head around how I had managed to make such simple but unforgivable mistakes. What are the odds! I travel many times a year and had never needed to make an insurance claim. The only time that I had such a need, I picked the wrong card to get the airline tickets. Then on the way to the hospital, I picked the wrong number to call; and further, I missed the window of time to file a claim.

Now I truly didn't know where this was going and what it would entail. Still stunned at the negative synchronicity, I didn't know whether to laugh or cry. I couldn't see any perfection in that moment, but maybe the reason is because I didn't need to see it. From my vantage point, I could only see what I saw, and maybe that was enough. Without calling it perfect, it was enough for me to decide the course of action in that moment. Not being able to submit the proof of purchase as required, in that moment there was clearly nothing left to do in the process.

With nothing to manage and no need to make stuff happen, I was definitely not going to invite the old friend called Worrying back. What's the secret to experiencing life's perfection again? Right, to meet each moment of life as it is, though it was hard for me to believe it in that moment.

Luckily, I have learned not to give it a damn, what I believe. Life becomes a matter of showing up and using the resources that I'm given in that moment. To receive, is to see everything that I'm given in every moment as a resource to be utilized. In Adamus' language, "Everything is here to serve me." "Energies are all mine." "Receive my own light." Uncomfortably, I relaxed.

A few weeks later, Kona hospital resent the ER bill to me. Meeting life as it is, I followed their instruction and paid the bill online, thankful that I was able to do so.

I had meant to cancel the Visa as I had applied for another credit card. But, since I expected to receive another medical bill from the doctor's office, I decided to let that card remain in good standing for another year, even though I was paying the annual fee without using it. Receiving that moment as it was, it just felt like an easier thing to do.

I wondered how long it was going to take for the doctor's office to find out that my insurance company was not paying the bill and they would have to redirect it to my address. Meanwhile, the insurance company kindly kept reminding me to submit the documents that I didn't have. I did nothing, as really there was nothing to do.

I flew to spend a month in the Netherlands for the last part of the summer. When I came back home, in the pile of mail, instead of finding the doctor's bill, I saw an envelope from Kona hospital. I opened it. The hospital had refunded me every penny I paid for the ER.

It looked like the insurance company had lost patience waiting for my documents to arrive and, as the card was still in good standing, and unexpectedly to me, decided to move ahead and pay all the outstanding bills.

Everything unfolds perfectly, even when I don't believe it or see how it's possible. Without forcing myself to believe, this has again taught me to simply show up in each moment fully, without trying to manage it. Receiving means to receive every moment as it is without pretending that I know better, because I, the little me doesn't.

No working at it. No analysis. Of course, while I'm receiving the natural flow of my own energy, little me certainly knew how to gratefully receive that refund.

End note: Having a helping profession to encourage people who find their way to my private practice to live fully, I experience my own challenges. This article was written in September 2023 but sat in my laptop "forgotten" as I was pulled back to my own familiar, "cozy" and "staying safe" gravitational shell, after I self-assessed it "too personal and too trivial for a greater audience" of Shaumbra Magazine. Thanks to the constant support of Crimson Circle in many ways, here I am, showing up.

DEAR MASTER

HOW DO I LEAVE THE GAMES BEHIND AND MOVE ON?

Compiled by Carolina Oquendo

Q – Dear Master, I feel like I'm ready for things to change in my life. Why does "the change" that feels so close - half a breath away, as you say - still elude me?

You're still looking outside for it. And I know it's very, very difficult. You've had so many lifetimes of the illusion that it's outside and suddenly you're going down the road of life and suddenly you take a sharp, sharp right turn; actually, almost 180-degree turn saying, "Oh, no. Actually, it is all my energy." That's okay. It takes a little bit to let that sink in.

But what's happening right now, I'm proud to say, is that you're now understanding that it's all on the inside, and you become in sync with your own energy. It's an energy compatibility. It's an energy flow. It's a grace with energy. It's like it's just all there for you. I call it "Ensynch,"

You don't have to work for it. You don't owe it anything. You don't even have to behave in a certain way. It's all there. It's all yours.

Now it's just taking a deep breath and feeling the magnificence of your own energy serving you, knowing that it has an inherent intelligence. Not like the human mind, but an intelligence in it. Knowing that it already has the wisdom.¹

Q – You've endlessly said that we don't have to do anything, but at the same time, you say we DO have to do something: move on. Then I get confused. What's the difference here?

[What I mean is] there's still a resistance. There's still a doubt and a questioning, and you take certain comfort and pleasure in that, playing the game of, "I'm almost there, but not quite." We don't have that luxury anymore.

We have to move on.

Technology is moving too fast. The New Light coming into the planet is pushing the old issues. These old stuck energies are coming forward right now. We're just at the tip of the iceberg here of the things that are going to rapidly change on the planet, and you can't be fence-sitters at this point. You can't sit on the fence.

It's either take that dive and move on, or get off the fence. Go back to the other side for a while. You'll have another chance later on.²

Q- Sometimes, when I'm really connected with myself, or just not distracted by other things, I feel a deep fear. It's not big, more like a lingering nuisance. Is this part of the resistance?

When you're right on the verge, you're right at that point of stepping over the cliff of time, then it's a little bit frightening.

It's like you're going to go parachuting. You hop in the airplane, you put on the parachute, and it all sounded like a really good idea back when you were drinking with your buddies one night at a bar, and suddenly you're on the airplane and it's taking off and you're like in one of those "Oh, crap" moments.

And now you're at altitude, it's time to jump out and you look around and everybody's looking at you like, "Hey, what are you chicken or something?" And this fear comes over, but you know you have to do it. I mean, you don't have to, but you know you better do it. And that's that crossing the line. It's kind of the same.³

[Remember] you don't have to chart the course. You don't have to figure out the logic. You don't have to do the reasoning into how all this happens. It's going to happen. It's only for you to experience the beauty of it. Yeah, and sometimes the difficulties, but that's beautiful also. It's only for you to allow and to experience.⁴

Q – So we come back to allowing then. Isn't it working? Or do I misunderstand allowing?

[It means] breaking out of the box of the mind.

Now, truth be known, the mind doesn't really care one way or the other, in a way. It will hold you in to the box as long as you want to be in the box, and it'll play the game with you.

It'll play doubt. It'll play limitation.

It's a machine that's serving you.

When it knows that you're real – and not just whining and complaining and not just imagining and daydreaming but you're really ready to go out of the box – it will cooperate with you.

It's been a tool that's kept you in the box because you've wanted to say in it. (...) It's almost become a nemesis, in a way, because it's held you in. There's a gravitational force and it uses elements like doubt and fear and survival and everything else.

But when the mind knows that you're really, really ready to break out of it, to go into knowingness, to go into the other realms, to go beyond, to go whatever you want to call it, multidimensional, to go into your real true Self, the mind will cooperate. But not a moment before.

Don't expect it to start handing things over. Only when you're at that moment of going out of the airplane, stepping out, will it do its switch and allow you to go. Until then, until that very moment you take that final step, the mind will try to protect you and try to keep you in.⁵

And then don't think about it. Don't think, "Should I have done that?" or "Maybe I should do it different" Stop that!

"I Am Here." That's it, "I Am Here."

Then the energies change (...) and then you move on and we do what we really came here to do. And let's have fun doing it, and let's do it with humor, and let's do it with abundance.⁶

You're going to realize that you were just trying to think through it too much, and you're going to get up and say, "Geez, I don't have to work this hard. I just have to let my energy serve me and guide me.

I just have to allow the flow of my soul. Oh! What was I thinking? I went back to my old human habits of trying to control and manipulate and make things happen. All I have to do is be present. That's it."⁷

You just need to be kind of aware and let your light shine.⁸

In Illumination Shoud 4, Adamus declared that music can be a way to expand beyond the old gravity into aerotheon, or “Full Spectrum Gravity.”

He also said that the most appropriate music for this would be composed and performed by Shaumbra.

To support this, Crimson Circle has created a public YouTube channel specifically for aerotheon music from Shaumbra!

Here are the basic guidelines:

- First, make sure you are familiar with what Adamus said about gravity, aerotheon, and this music project in Shoud 4 of the Illumination Series.
- The music must be original content created by you. No covers, sampling or submission of materials copyrighted or created by another artist.
- No AI-generated music. Human-generated electronic music is acceptable.
- Instrumental only, no singing or words. Non-lyric vocalizing is acceptable.
- We will accept up to three music submissions per artist.
- Music file should be 20 minutes or more in length. Looping is acceptable.
- Note: Submission does not guarantee publication. Each composition will be reviewed by the staff for quality and appropriateness.

NOTE:
There are several important requirements for submitting your music.
Please read everything on the info page BEFORE sending in any files.

Happy composing!

BEYOND THE HUMAN SENSES

A sense is a way to both perceive and create reality. We know about the five human senses, but Adamus says that these “senses” are simply mechanisms of the true human sense, which is actually Focus. As embodied Masters, we learn to go beyond Focus into forgotten angelic senses such as Unity, Imagination and – the greatest sense of all – Love. In fact, opening to this true sensuality is the doorway to freedom. As angelic beings, we have more than 200,000 different senses, or ways to perceive reality. To experience being human, we went deep into the sense of Focus. However, this sense has its own gravity, constantly pulling itself into tighter and tighter focus, until it collapses into itself, denying all other realities. Now we can release the gravity and open up our other senses. Join Adamus and Yoham on this deep dive into the senses. It’s like opening your eyes for the first time – the world will never be quite the same!

SHAUMBRA HEARTBEAT

A BRIEF HISTORY OF LOVE

(CLICK ON PLAYER TO BEGIN LISTENING TO THE AUDIO VERSION OF THE ARTICLE)

Love. It's complicated. Particularly love as we've known it, which could be called Love 1.0. Adamus is now talking about Love 2.0, which is similar but actually very different. For example, when I search on the difference between these terms in software, 2.0 indicates a complete change and departure from the previous version, whereas a slight improvement would simply be 1.1, 1.2, etc. In fact, I found this quote about software to be quite applicable to the topic: "If you continue to develop on 1.0, then 2.0 should be a fork. Making changes in 1.0 after the fork will fragment you..." In other words, it's not just an upgrade but a complete redesign.

Of course, we've all had experiences with the old version of love, so some of my stories might feel familiar.

In adolescence I had a rich and vivid imagination, living out long and detailed adventures while washing dishes, riding in the family car, going for a walk, or doing most anything else. I suppose it was my way of escaping reality, or maybe it was just my entertainment. These inner escapades were nearly always about love and had two very common themes: being "found" by my one true love, then "testing" our love in all sorts of ways. I took myself through so many complicated challenges and even heartbreaks that the tears were quite real as I mourned or celebrated the latest inner caper.

Now, I didn't grow up on fairytales (unless you count the Bible) because fiction was not allowed in our house. So, the idea of meeting the prince of my dreams and living happily ever after – after proving his loyalty of course – was something already within me. I suppose after so many lifetimes of weariness and struggle, one can't help but look for that tricky bright spot that is love as we've known it. Not to mention the allure of being "rescued" from a dreary life and swept away to fantasyland. The only stories of love I remember being exposed to were in the Bible, and most of those were terribly unhealthy, at least by today's standards of emotional maturity. But I couldn't wait to experience love, and even prayed that Jesus would delay his imminent Second Coming so I wouldn't miss out!

I remember asking my dad how I would find the right person, and he said, "God will bring him to you. But make sure you get it right because you can only give your heart away once." So, the first guy that "God brought to me" ended up being my husband for the next 10 years, even though we were quite ill-suited for each other. I was barely 18, full of raging hormones (which I interpreted as love) and, well, life happens.

As an adult, I have experienced many iterations of love. To be sure, the innocent biological drive to procreate worked out much differently in real life than my early love fantasies. Full of unconscious expectations and a seemingly endless supply of matching wounds, it was love based on mutual need, codependence, and lack of awareness. And yet, that early relationship began my long journey of healing, which would eventually lead me to true and everlasting Love 2.0.

But before that... after my first marriage ended, the obsessive fascination with a friend-turned-lover allowed me to experience the compelling nature of karma. It was the early days of my spiritual exploration, and I got a past life reading from a local seeress. She told me the story of a lifetime shared with this person that ended in loving tragedy. It was a short and furtive relationship in this lifetime, but I learned a lot about how energies move and resolve between people.

Over the years I've had other long-term relationships with varying degrees of health and balance. If soul mates were real, one of them would certainly qualify; our connection was that intense. We had clearly reunited to work things out in mutual support (and this time without killing each other in the process). There was a lot of passion and drama (again, those matching wounds), but it was also a time of more growth and maturing. Another partner was clearly an old friend, but the gentle connection we shared sometimes spilled over into apathy and annoyance. And when the imbalanced dynamics and unmet needs evolved, the relationship just no longer worked.

Then there was the invisible affiliation, connecting and interacting with someone my soul knew from eternity but who was rarely in physical proximity. It wasn't meant to be an earthly relationship, but the intense inner experiences were just as real as the ones of my youth... and now sometimes they were shared.

Clearly, Love 1.0 has manifested for humans in countless iterations. And despite my early dream of finding the one and living happily ever after, my soul had other ideas of who that might be.

In more recent years, it seemed relationships for me had run their course. Single again, I tried the online scene to meet people, but it was like looking for a diamond in an iron mine. Eventually I gave up and closed my dating accounts, aware of the fact that, finally, I was very happy with only my Self. Sure, a warm body would be nice to snuggle with on cold winter evenings, or someone to go hiking with and laugh together, but I had plenty of friends for most of those things. At last, I was at peace alone.

(Although there was a day when, in a moment of feeling sorry for myself in this solitary state, I asked my invisible friends if I would ever experience love again. Usually, they tend to offer helpful answers, but this time all I heard was laughter. At least somebody found my situation funny.)

Over time it became clear that I didn't want another relationship! "WAY too much trouble," I'd tell myself. "Been there, done that, had enough." But a deeper reason was that I didn't want any intrusion on the love that was unfolding within me. Many were the times that I stopped to catch my breath, overcome by the warmth of love washing through my heart and body. How could I feel so in love when there was no outside lover in my reality?

As this overwhelming, all-encompassing, soul-level love became more and more present, it brought a level of joy I'd never known before. Life became easy, magical, fulfilling, and fun. Bedtime became my favorite time of day, not for being tired but because all my attention could once again be with this incredible glow in my heart, the feeling of love flowing between me and ME. I lacked for nothing and no one.

Then one day, I noticed a glimmer of this incredible inner reality reflected on the outside. There was someone I'd known for several years who began appearing to me in a new light. We had become easy friends, but I started noticing the gentle kindness, the steadiness in passing storms, the Master behind the disguise, and the love of Self beneath it all. Intriguing as it was, I studiously ignored my interest in this person, not wanting the remotest possibility of damaging the friendship we already shared. But life sometimes demands a leap of faith, or at least a toe over the edge of the abyss, and in a few tentative conversations, something new and wondrous opened up between us.

Right there in front of me was the embodiment of Love 2.0. No, it wasn't this other person; he was simply a reflection of the love that was already flourishing inside. You see, his inner prime directive was also self-love. He too didn't want anything or anyone to detract from that and wasn't expecting to find love ever again. But this time, rather than being drawn together by matching wounds, unfinished karma, or unmet needs, we discovered the matching priorities of a Master: I am my priority. I share my wholeness with you because it's so much fun!

This amazing experience is sublime in the shared joy, laughter, support, and ecstasy, and it is wholly without need, grasping, expectation, or obligation. Rather than looking for ways to hold on and keep this love, we continue to set it free and return to ourselves, secure in the wholeness that's already within. Every moment is a celebration of this inner "Love 2.0" that is now amazingly reflected in another being.

What do I wish for you to know from all this? Simply that earthly Love 2.0 begins and ends with Self, the only place where such deep longing can be fulfilled. And when that happens, the opportunity arises for it to be reflected back to you in new ways. In the soon-to-be-released Cloud Class Adamus states, "In Love 2.0, everything presents itself to you as love." I am simply here to assure you that it's true. Whatever blocks or difficulties may be felt regarding total acceptance of yourself, please know that getting through them is the greatest gift you could possibly give to – and receive from – your Self.

"What comes next in your life is being in that true consciousness of love at all times, letting everything reflect back to you love itself."

– Adamus

Adamus' new Cloud Class, Love 2.0 will be available in the Crimson Circle store by February 28, 2024.
