THE ROAD LESS TRAVELED

By Geoffrey Hoppe

(CLICK ON PLAYER TO BEGIN LISTENING TO THE AUDIO VERSION OF THE ARTICLE) (CLICK ON THIS PLAYER BELOW TO LISTEN TO THE SHAUMBRA FREEWAY SONG)

“Two roads diverged in a wood, and I – I took the one less traveled by. And that has made all the difference.”

– Robert Frost

One of the many notable characteristics of Shaumbra is that they have chosen the road less traveled. It can be a very lonely road. Far too often it's filled with potholes, fallen trees and huge boulders blocking the path, not to mention the wild animals and ugly demons hiding in the woods.

Unlike the conventional roadways of life taken by others, the Shaumbra Free-Way isn't paved, there are no convenient rest stops, no road signs for directions and no painted lines to keep you in your lane. It's not a four-lane roadway or even a two-lane; it only goes in one direction. Even if you think you want to go back the other way, there's no turning around once you choose this path.

It makes me wonder why anyone would dare to choose this Free-Way? It's not even on the map like all of the other mass consciousness roads. You have to find it on your own, and it only appears when you're ready. There's no external GPS to guide you along. There are no major intersections or off ramps where you can head in another direction. There are, however, a lot of dead-end turns-outs, better known as makyos. It's very easy to get distracted on the Shaumbra Free-Way with diversions like Guru Avenue, Crystal Court, Healer Highway, Pleiadian Place, Ritual Road and Suffering Street. But then you realize it's a dead end and get back on The Way.

Why did we deliberately take the road less traveled? Regular roadways go from one city to the next, and the next and the next. They are crowded, and often fraught with bad drivers, boring landscapes, speed limits, stop lights and sometimes even road rage. You never know when you're going to get pulled over by the police for not obeying the laws. On the Shaumbra Free-Way, you won't find many other travelers. There are no rules other than the ones you create for yourself in your mind. And instead of going endlessly from city to city, the Shaumbra Free-Way leads to the Land of Realization, in the State of Sovereignty.

Indeed, Shaumbra take the road less traveled. It can be arduous at times, but ultimately filled with adventures and discoveries not available on any other path. Along the way, you eventually meet your Master Self, your Soul, your past and future, your divinity and your essence. You simply cannot find these things on mass consciousness roadways.

Even as the Crimson Circle organization, we tend to take the road less traveled. Our main entities (Adamus, Tobias and Kuthumi) are anything but ordinary in the world of channeled spooks. Especially Adamus. He has been jokingly referred to as the “Bad Boy of the New Age” by a well-known channeler. Our entities have all experienced real human lifetimes before their ascension so they understand our road less traveled. They cuss on occasion, tell bad jokes, provoke us, annoy us, and love us in a way that only a former human can do. Many mainstream New Agers are shocked and appalled at their messages because, well, it's the road less traveled. A thousand jaws dropped recently during a podcast when Adamus calmly stated, “I hate Jesus.” WTF? My jaw dropped! He went on to explain that Jesus is a human construct, and not the same being as Yeshua ben Joseph from the actual biblical times. (Surprisingly, almost all of the comments in the chat room agreed with Adamus while all the time I'm sure my mother was rolling over in her urn.)

We take the road-less-traveled more than most other New Age and spiritual organizations. We don't hawk products at our workshops or in-person events because we want to maintain a clean, safe space. We don't need or want to ever push products. We don't send daily or weekly email blasters out to the Shaumbra mailing list. Instead, we publish a free monthly e-magazine with great articles and current information about events and products. We don't have “levels” that you need to attain through participation in expensive classes. We don't have membership dues, and the majority of our content is free of charge.

When I do podcast interviews, we're always told that we can promote our products and classes during the interview. Each time I politely decline. I don't want to taint the sacred space by hyping products. Instead, we know that some listeners will come to our website and store, and if they're interested in more, they can listen to the free Shouds or take part in paid products or services. But we don't need to hawk our wares.

Even as an organization we take the road less traveled. We do nearly everything in-house, from our video and graphic productions, to event management, customer service and technology. We currently have 11 full-time programmers and tech specialists on staff, something unheard of in the spiritual arena. We learned a long time ago that we need to maintain Shaumbra-compatible energies, something that didn't happen when we used outside tech firms.

Here's another example of taking the road less traveled as an organization. It's something I'm very excited about, but also a bit anxious. We're going to introduce it at the upcoming Metaphysics of the Merlin online gathering on September 7-8. It's a video project called Master Stories – Into the Apocalypse. We've been working on it for well over a year, and now the first episodes are ready. What's different about it? What makes it the road less traveled? First, let me explain what it is:

Shortly before Heaven's Cross in March 2023, Adamus told me he wanted us to track the experiences of about a dozen Shaumbra to see and hear what changes they'd be going through around the time of the Apocalypse. For a year, we have been recording interviews with a group of Shaumbra from different parts of the world, and then using those conversations for creating a series of films. The project was directed and managed by Anastasia McMillan, a talented Shaumbra from Poland. Together with Jonathan Kray from Holland, producer of the Rude Awakening film, they have been distilling about 60 hours of recorded material and making documentary films that reflect experiences of so many of us. A few episodes will be ready for release on September 16 with a few more to follow before the end of this year.

How is this part of our road less traveled, different than what the mainstream New Age is putting out? It's huge. We're featuring real Masters, with their real stories. The film series isn't about Ascended Masters or gurus. It's about Shaumbra that have been on the road less traveled, and now it's time to tell their/our stories. It's something Adamus first mentioned in Sedona about 9 years ago when he was a guest at a Kryon conference. He said it was time for humans to be on stage as examples of the new Masters, instead of channeled entities like him or the several other channelers on stage at the time. And now we're ready. Sure, there will still be many people that prefer to listen to a channeled non-physical entity, but I believe that Shaumbra is ready and genuinely interested in hearing stories from real-life Masters.

Also, we're going to offer the new Master Stories film series free of charge. That's definitely the road less traveled. We've invested a lot of time and resources into the project, but we feel it's important for others to see and hear real human Masters. Right now, it's important to share the message without payment being an obstacle for viewers. We'll talk more about the project on Sunday morning during the upcoming Metaphysics of the Merlin online event, along with showing a preview.

We're on the road less traveled, but that shouldn't be a surprise. We've been doing it since the times of the Temples of Tien in Atlantis, and the times of Yeshua some 2000 years ago. Now we're back at the Time of Machines to complete the journey and share our light with others who may be at “the crossroads in the woods.” The road less traveled may not be the easy way, but ultimately, it's The Only Way home.

CHECK OUT THE LINE-UP OF ENTITIES FOR THE UPCOMING METAPHYSICS OF THE MERLIN ONLINE EVENT!

We'll go from the biblical times of Yeshua ben Joseph to the Future Human in 2044, and just about everything in between. Kuthumi Lal Singh will make his annual appearance during the event, and we'll hear from the collective entity of Shaumbra. Merlin will bring in his magic and the Beloved St. Germain will close out the gathering with an uplifting message.

It's our 10th annual Merlin gathering. It all started with a live gathering Romania in 2014, and subsequent live gatherings in Romania and Slovenia per Adamus' request. COVID forced us to go online in 2020, which actually turned out to be a good thing because so many more Shaumbra can participate.

The annual Merlin gathering has proven to be a time of intense and ground-breaking messages from the entities. In 2022, St. Germain announced the coming of Heaven's Cross. We've heard from Mark Twain with his delightful story about "Checking into Heaven," a very touching message from Nikola Tesla, insights from Steve Jobs, and the latest update from Gaia.

Join us this year for more profound messages plus the magic of Merlin! Geoff and Linda Hoppe will present the annual Inspire Consciousness award during their Sunday morning talk, plus they'll announce an exciting new project called Master Stories. The entire two days are filled with rich content from the entities, without any fluff or fill. Just insightful and inspiring messages. You'll have 90 days to view the sessions after the live event (120 days for CC Angels.)

The annual Merlin online event has become one of the biggest and most noteworthy Shaumbra gatherings of the year. Register now... the early-bird discount has been extended to September 4!

ALLOWING? YES, ALLOWING!!

By Todd Oja

This "Allowing" kick Adamus is on has been a challenge. What does "Allowing" really mean? I don't think it means sitting on the couch eating Bonbons waiting for something to grab me, but I have questions.

What is all this "Allow my energy to serve me as a Master" and "Let energy work for me" business?

I have a lot of energy showing up as passion, desire, accomplishment, ambition. Aren't those my energy too? But somehow, they don't serve me like the energy that's associated with "Allowing."

Is the "Allowing" energy different in some way?

Ok, so the Allowing energy serves me, but not the other energy I associate with things like motivation, desire, ambition, passion, etc. because now this "Allowing" energy is different. Ohhh, I see... No, I don't see!!

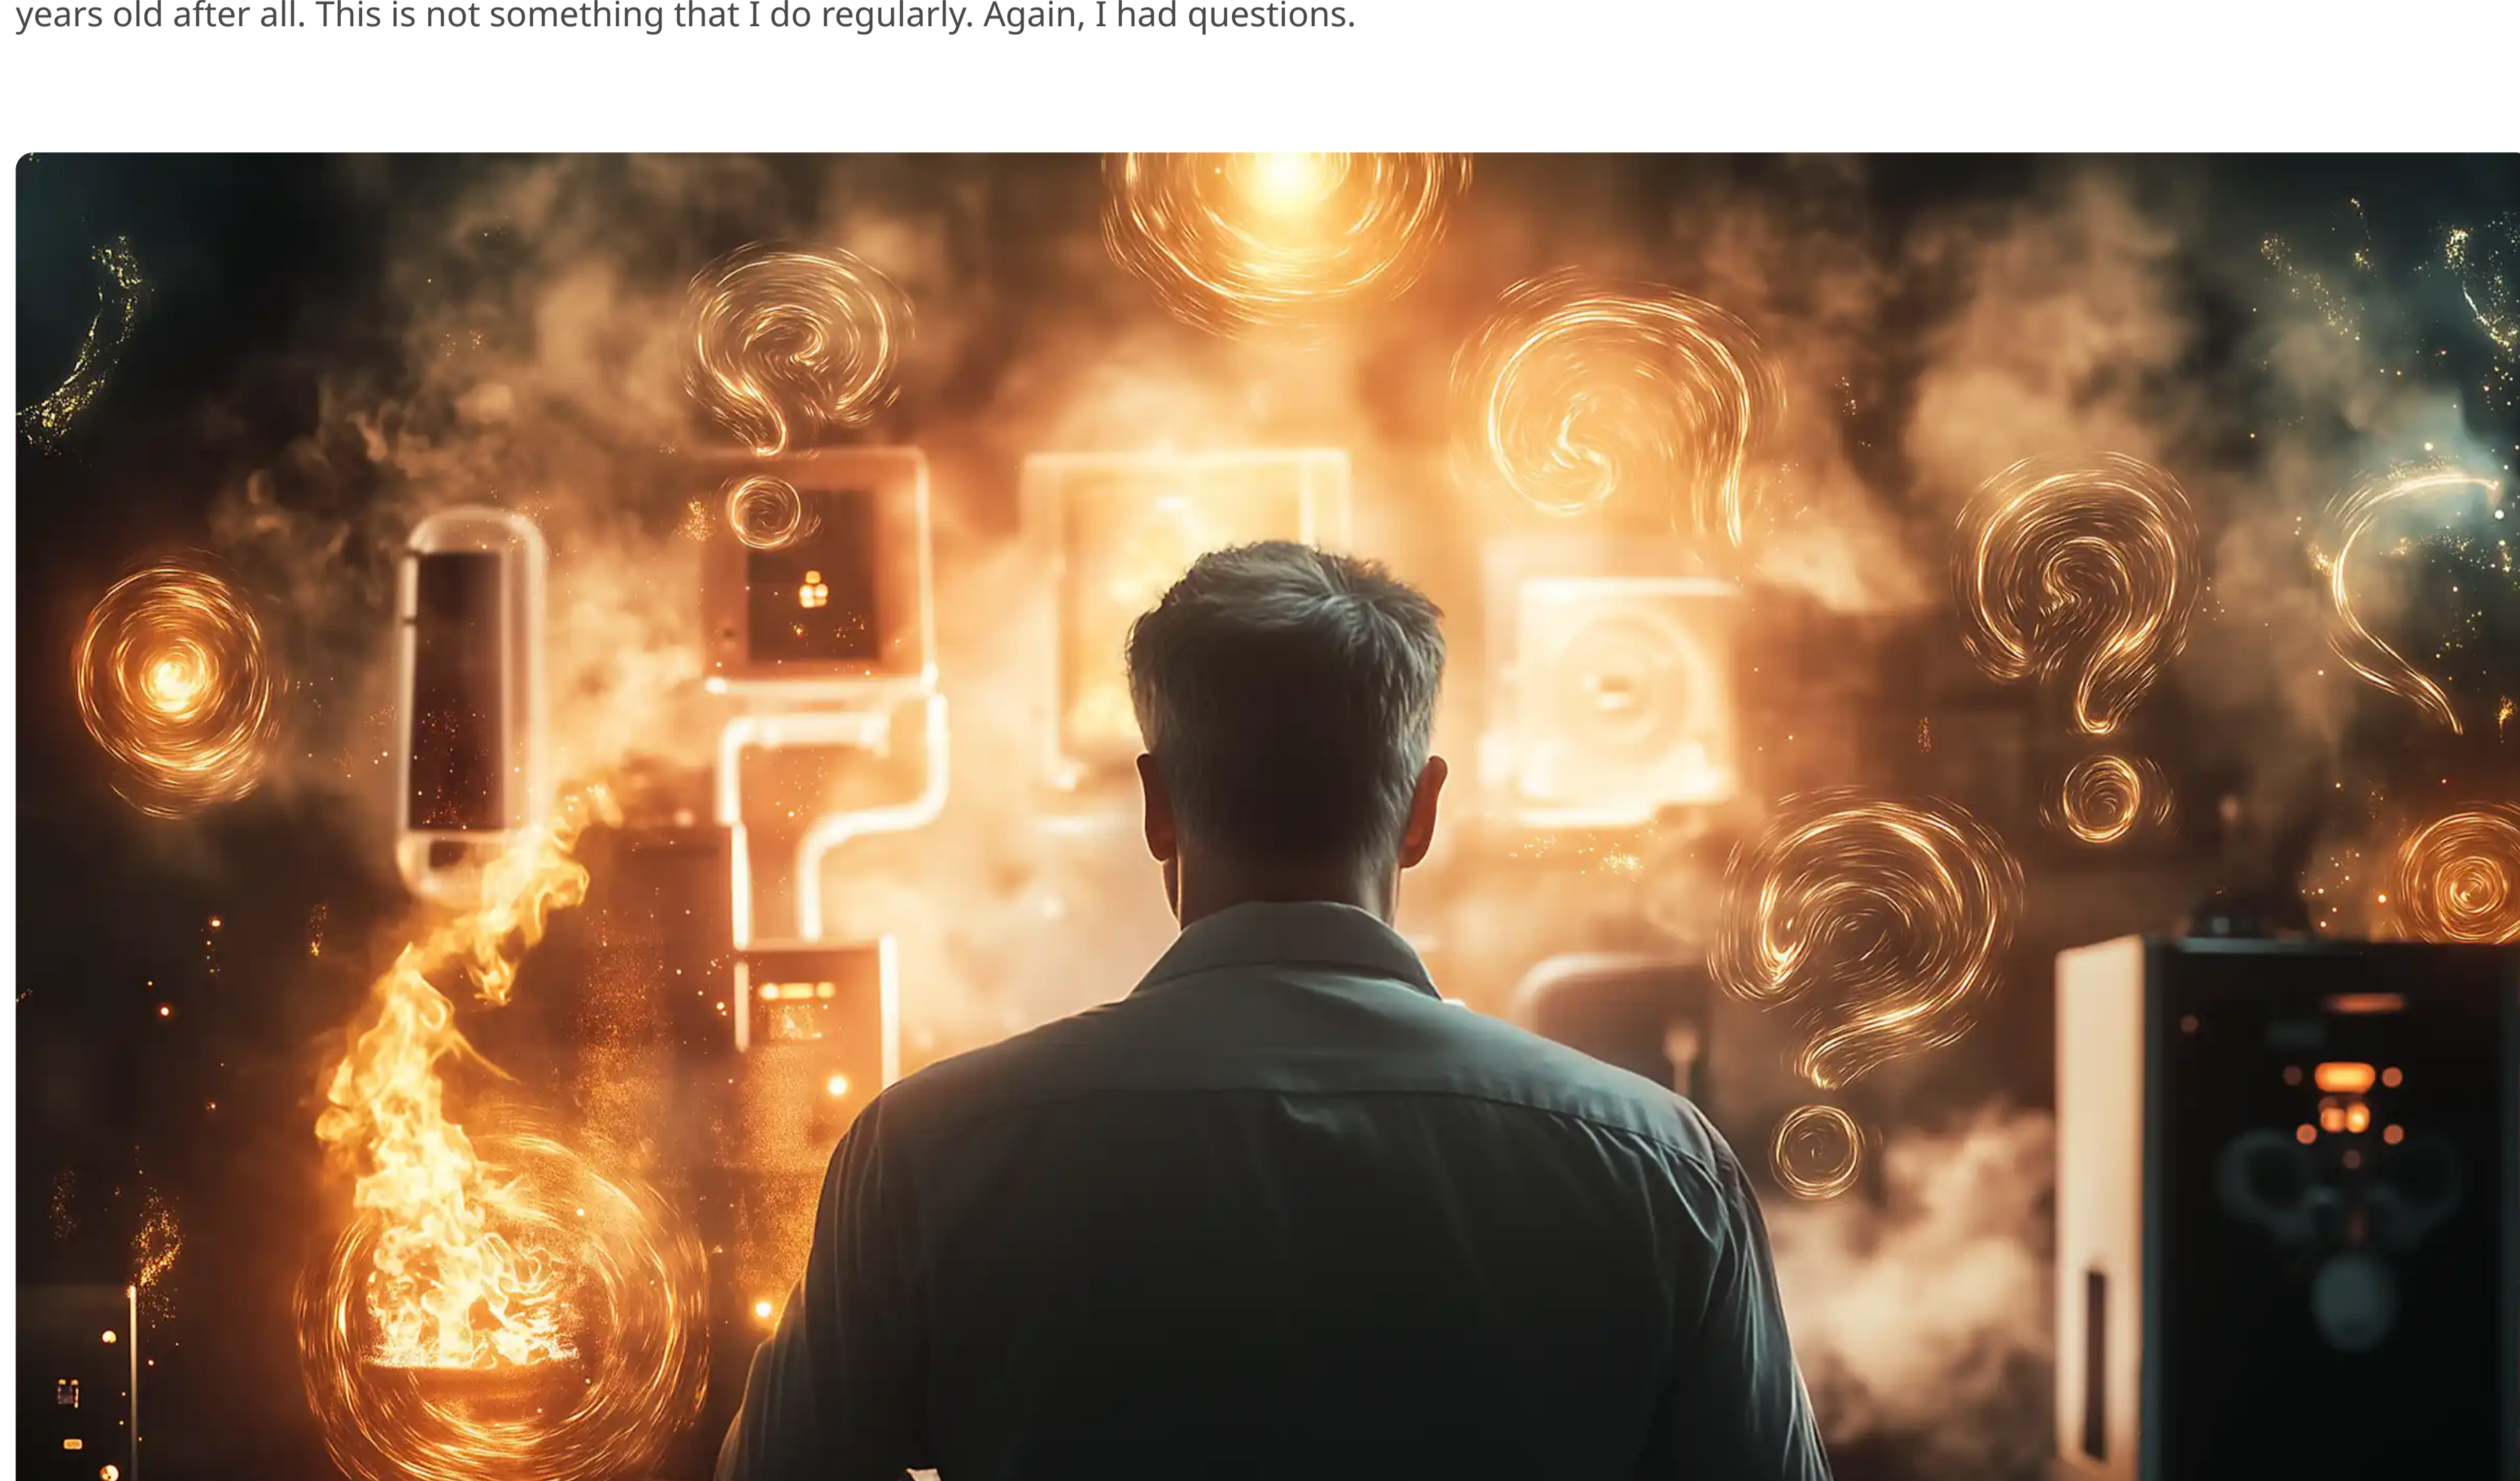

The beatings with the "Allowing" pugil stick will continue until morale improves. Guess I better get the headgear on.

Evidently what I previously thought was "Allowing" is incorrect. *%$%# (Expression of frustration; the expansive energies of aerotheon contributing to my colorful vocabulary. Pardon me, I'm letting my expansion show).

I'm just not getting this Allowing thing. Why is it so elusive? I mean it's so simplistic and almost childlike the way Adamus describes it, but surely, I'm not the only Shaumbra who has been dancing with this "Allowing" message and feeling like I'm just not getting it. Adamus has spent a lot of time on the topic, so it must be important, right? And if I'm the only one not getting it, Adamus surely would have moved on. There must be better use of his teaching time with Shaumbra than being stuck on this Allowing kick only for my benefit, right? Thoughts of being the one holding the whole class back flash before me in the all too recognizable pattern of self-judgment, condemnation and criticism. Ah %#-&!!! Oops, there's that expansion again!

Turns out that replacing a furnace was going to be the catalyst for my breakthrough around allowing. I was visited – rather my house was visited with me in – it by a tornado last year which did some redecorating of things like the roof, the paint, gutters, deck, fence, etc. ("That's my energy serving me," came the snide internal comment. Oh ya, I guess he hears those too.) It took over a year to get all that worked through and just when I felt like I could relax and finally chill, the furnace came knocking. Thank you for waiting until after the tornado but a short breath or three in between would have been appreciated.

Since this isn't familiar territory, the process commences of researching furnace companies and selecting 5 or 6 to get some options. I mean, it was 25 years old after all. This is not something that I do regularly. Again, I had questions.

AI Generated

What is a heat pump vs. a furnace?

What size do I need?

What is the $$$ that I'm looking at?

Is it less than replacing a roof or painting the house? Oh, please be the case!

Then there is the coordination of schedules for each company to come look at my aging equipment... I'm talking about the furnace here. Geez Shaumbra! Keep your minds on track.

They each needed a 4-hour window in which they would notify me when they would be coming over. With 5 companies vying for the job, that is 2.5 days of my time committed to accommodate maybe 5 hours of in-person on-site presence so they can each review the current setup. At this point, I was seriously contemplating sharpening my skills at rubbing two sticks together and using an old coffee can with a dryer vent to pipe the smoke out a window. Then a small company called Plumb Crazy caught my attention (I liked them before even calling). They were a little different. "Send me some pictures and I'll take a look and let you know if a visit is needed," he said.

What??? I didn't need to carve out a full day for a 30-minute review of my current furnace? Done! Pictures are on the way.

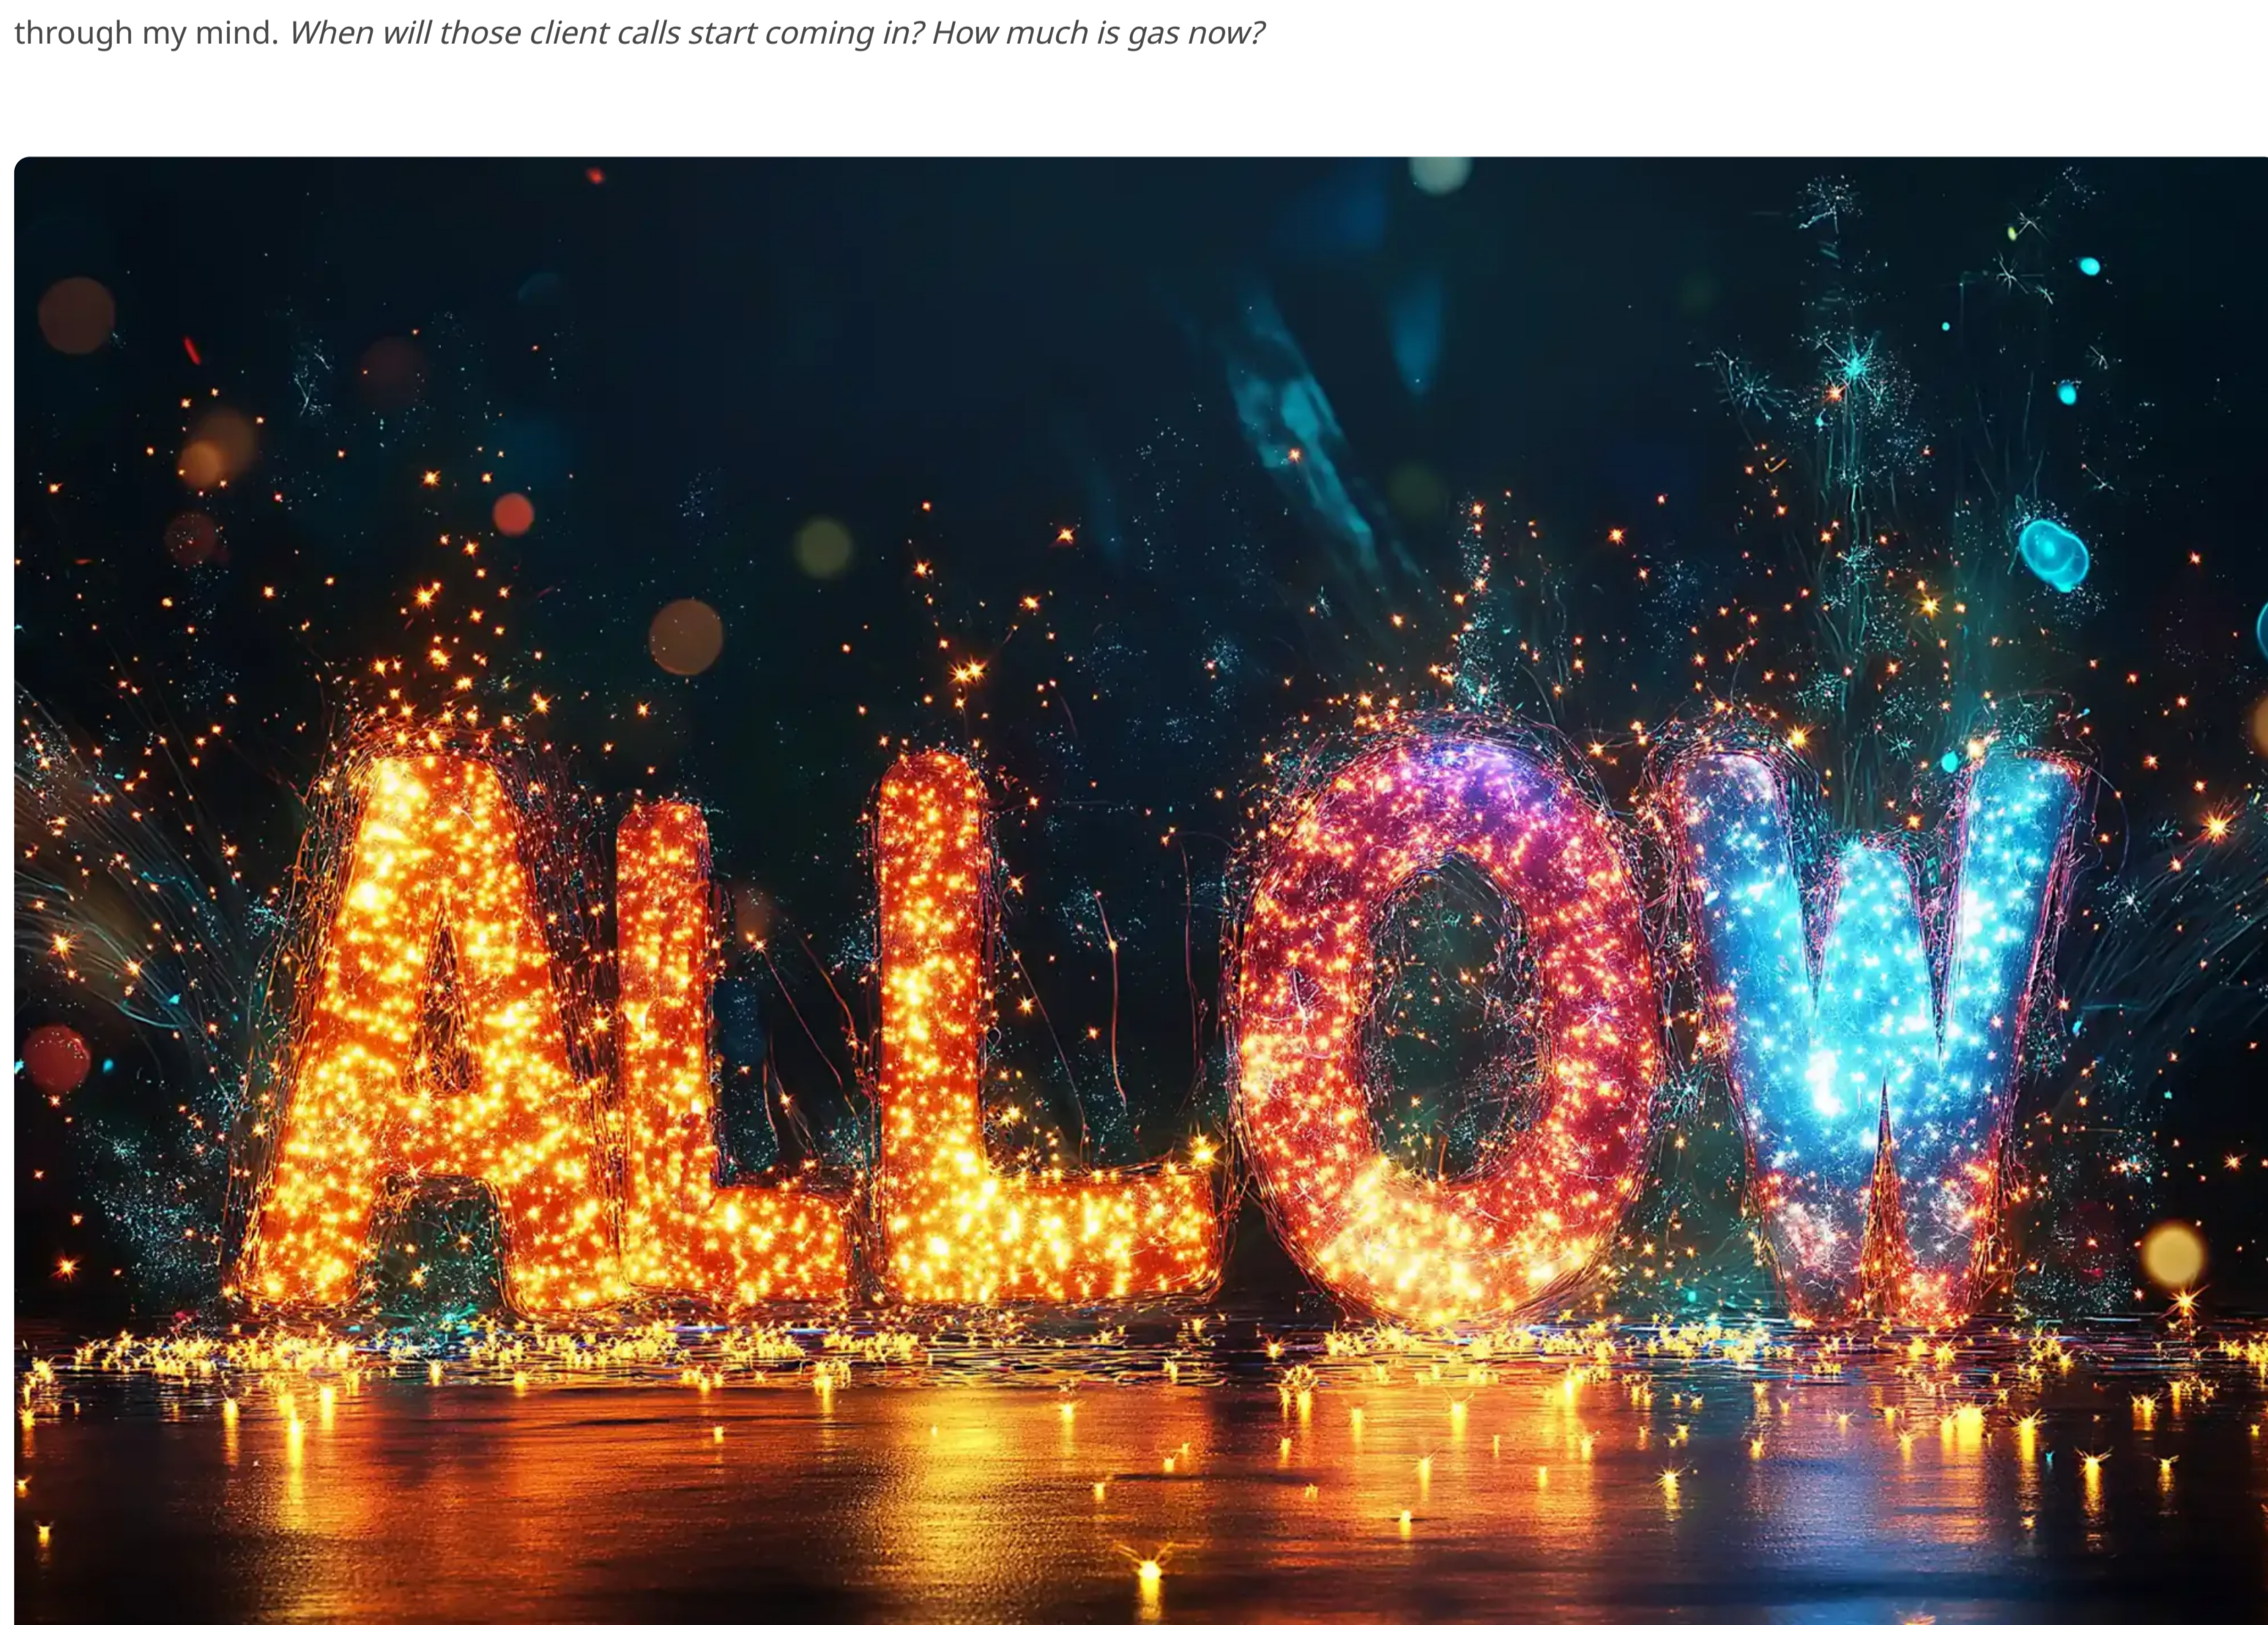

We exchanged texts to provide some clarification of the work. Am I thinking about a Cadillac with all the new tech – something that reads my mind, knows when I'll be home, heats the toilet seats before sitting down – i.e. The AI Furnace Solution, or a VW bug solution? I'm mostly looking to improve on a coffee can with a dryer vent smokestack; you know, just trying to keep expectations reasonable. Then he called and asked if he could schedule me in the next day or two. Say what? I started the furnace replacement process while it's still 100 degrees outside so there was no need to rush. In the aftermath of a tornado, I was creating space by starting this process early so I could finally do something at a relaxing pace... or was I?

Plumb Crazy (I do like that name) had scheduled work to fill the week but had just been notified that there was an issue, and their work would be delayed. So, they were looking to fill the recently acquired free time and if I could swing the installation in the next two days, they could give me a discount for helping them out.

Without going into detail, I thought I was going to have to sell those two sticks to cough up what was needed on really short notice. After the install, that would leave me with about $8.60 in the bank. About enough for a cup of Joe at the local foo-foo coffee establishment. Probably an average cup at that. Without the offered discount it wasn't even an option, so I had mixed emotions. Could I really pull this off? "I will check what I can do and get back to you" was my slightly stunned reply. I needed some time to catch my breath and seriously decide, even if I could swing it, should I? It was just happening so fast. I needed to check my client jobs and availability, other commitments, plus any non-discretionary payments as my accounts were about to be vacuumed clean. (Sure wish my vacuum worked that well.) My mind was trying to grasp it all.

I checked my schedule and saw nothing that prevented either of the next two days being available. Amazing! Now it's just odd – my schedule working out, their schedule just happening to change at the same time, needing to fill a time slot, and things just "falling" into place. It was also odd that there would be just enough to cover the cost with the discount. This would definitely clean out any excess bank account clutter which is more than a little concerning. With scheduled payment obligations combined with a recent thinning of client jobs, I was feeling a little out of control. As I pieced things together and took a deep breath (where's Linda when you need her?) the thought came "Allow." And with that, I became aware of a bigger perspective being revealed.

An investment organization had gone bankrupt some years ago and still had frozen accounts. Long story short, there was an outstanding court settlement regarding suits against other companies which would be considered assets if won in court. There hadn't been much promise for that scenario and my reimbursement as a claimant was far down on the priority list. Turns out a suit was won, and I received an unexpected check in the mail just 5 days earlier. I do not recommend that particular financial management program, by the way, but it was a complete and total surprise windfall. I realized that check would just cover what the now discounted furnace was going to cost, and I'd still have a massive $8.60 balance left over. More questions started running through my mind. When will those client calls start coming in? How much is gas now?

Ok. "I can make tomorrow work" was my reply. Gulp!

That evening I received another call from the installers. The distributor didn't have the furnace in stock, but they could provide an upgrade to a better model which they did have in stock, at no extra charge.

Truly I couldn't make this up, nor is it something I could've planned by any stretch. It required noticing and allowing. I had to show up for my part, such as feeling into and finding potential companies, calling and coordinating appointments. I had to go through the steps and, though I can't say offhand, there was probably something that brought my attention to Plumb Crazy. Maybe it was just an apropos reflection of my mental state. Sometimes messages are literal. Things were just unfolding, like it all had to happen in the flow and none of it could I have planned out or "made" happen.

It hit me... This was allowing and I was experiencing it in real-time. As Adamus has said, the big decisions will be taken care of by allowing. It was as if the space in my availability (due to a thinning of client jobs) was deliberately designed so this could take place. My mind was worried about not having jobs booked out and now how was I going to cover the furnace on top of all the other costs? My energy was somehow lining things up for me before I knew the purpose.

Once the furnace was installed, I received more calls from clients and my calendar filled up again. I wondered how long my schedule would have stayed clear if I had not said yes.

Ahhh ok. Now I get the "Allowing" thing a little better.

The thought that continues to come to mind is something Adamus said at a Shoud a while back and it stuck. You know, those gems that just stick when they are right for you to hear and don't go away. It explains so much now with this experience of allowing. A question was posed to Adamus regarding the biggest lesson for St. Germain in his last lifetime, and his answer was about how he developed a different way of learning. That's what's going on (with the new physics, the World Changes, and shining our light. In this designated ascendeer life experience, I'm being "gently" guided to learn differently (I use that word "gently" extremely loosely). I won't get it perfect, but I now have first-hand experience of allowing. For me, it was noticing that there was a flow beyond what I could personally organize or make happen. Since our energy is always serving us there is not a moment when it isn't there. It's about being aware of it so I can better tune in to what's already there. For me, the noticing is tied to the "Allowing" and then it reinforces more allowing.

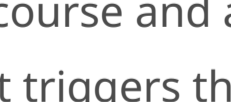

I can hear the Master's words: "Don't get in the way. I'm working here." Not getting in my way has been an issue for the duration of this life. As I get better at noticing, I will continue to increase confidence in seeing how my energy is working for me, and as I see more, so will the allowing. Soon to follow, I suspect I will see the allowing before seeing the energy, even though it's all happening at the same time.

If your aerotheon experience has been similar to my expansion with cussing or feeling frustrated, not sleeping, or however it's showing up for you, stay the course and ask for an experience of allowing so that you will recognize it. Be courageous, as there will be many opportunities to "not allow" based on what triggers the mind.

Whether it's about creativity, shining our light, energy as our inter-communication, or expanding gravity, I'm committed to learning differently.

The bell has rung. Class is in. Must be time to learn. $#@&*!

LIVING LIGHT

An Enchanting Tale of Creation

Cost: $35

Format: Streaming audio, video and online text e-reader

Access: 90 days (120 days for CC Angels)

Embark on an enthralling journey of creation with Adamah, also known as Gaia, as 'she' relates the origins of life and matter, starting from the Big Bang to the formation of Earth (Terra), the emergence of plant and animal kingdoms, and the creation of the Adam Kadmon (human) template.

Adamah describes answering the call of Metatron and being guided by the dreams of the angels on a journey of pure light. The process shared is still the essence of creation. As more people embody this living crystalline light, Earth will evolve into a true Planet of Light, home to beings of living light who are free from biological constraints.

It is time for humans to take on the vital role of caretakers of our precious planet. Adamah promises to guide humanity for the next 20-30 years, eventually passing on this guardianship to those who embrace their light.

However, people are beginning to look for Standards, particularly in their dream state, and are encountering you, attracted by your light. We are beginning to see the fulfillment of our ancient dream of Earth as the planet of love and Realization but, for the sake of all creation, please leave suffering behind you.

It is time for freedom from old limitations, and for integration of the light body, currently marked by a fair amount of physical pain. However, a critical part of all this is releasing the consciousness of suffering. It is simply not necessary for enlightenment, and others will be following your example.

ASK TOBIAS: THE EVOLUTION OF GAIA – RE-RELEASE!

Transferring Ownership of Planet Earth

Cost: $20

Format: Downloadable audio and text

Access: Unlimited

Gaia, the spirit of our beloved planet, is in the process of evolution. After playing a vital role in the experiment of embedding consciousness into dense physical matter, Gaia has begun her departure as the custodian of Earth. Tobias talks about what happens now as Gaia makes this significant transition, including intense Earth and weather changes, the energy crisis, and especially the fact that humanity must now take full responsibility for our home. Gaia is leaving many gifts to help us write the new "operating instructions" for respecting and caring for the Earth's environment.

Acknowledging the love that Gaia has for Earth, Tobias emphasizes the importance of respecting nature, using common sense when it comes to the environment, and developing new energy sources, including something called "intermagnetics," as humanity assumes this new responsibility.

THE ART OF LIGHT – PART 1: IMAGINATION

Unleashing Your Creative Potential

Cost: $195

Format: Streaming audio, video, and online text e-reader

Access: 90 days (120 days for CC Angels)

Delve into the profound ability of imagination to literally create reality! Remember how to tap into this natural ability, a vital tool for bringing in your dreams from the other realms and shaping your human reality. Adamus explains how imagination manifests human desires using energy, light, and gravity to form the atomic structures of this physical realm. In fact, this physical universe itself was brought into existence by imagination.

Adamus emphasizes the importance of accessing pure imagination, allowing your passion to guide the process without worrying about the details. He guides several experiences in which you can connect with imagination as the indispensable creative tool of the Master.

Imagination is not just daydreaming. It is reality building in your light. Light is imagination. Can you imagine how that changes everything?

– Adamus

UNRAVELING THE SWEATER

By Zoe Cifuentes

I embarked on my journey with Crimson Circle a few months after hearing Tobias's call 25 years ago to return Home and receive the fruit of the crystal rose. Before that, my mind was limited and confined to a narrow perspective. Today, I can confidently say from my heart, soul, and inner certainty that there is more to me than just my human identity. This experience has taken me to levels I never thought possible.

As humans, we have identified so much with our physical bodies, cells and atoms, that we were unaware of anything beyond. Just as the caterpillar was unaware that within the cocoon it was building, a beautiful butterfly was developing inside it, we too, when we arrived on the planet, began to knit a kind of sweater with a very fine thread around us. We forgot that someone was sleeping deeply beneath it, and one day, they would be ready to wake up.

After so many lifetimes, we had forgotten how to enjoy life and that it could be abundant in everything. We had forgotten that we came with a purpose to this life. We had really forgotten who we were. We thought and believed that we were just humans with a mind and physical body: the body defined by ancestral DNA and the mind framed within certain parameters.

Today, after the incredible journey with the Crimson Circle and all its teachings, I can confidently say that I am not just this body and mind, this "sweater" that constrained me with physical and emotional pain. As both Adamus and Tobias have said, there is something more; a diamond, a Master, a Soul, waiting for the right moment to say, "The time has come to unravel that sweater. You don't need it anymore." It was time to complete the experience of the deepest, densest place, where the I Am had never ventured before.

Twenty-five years have passed since Tobias' call, with teachings from the most basic fundamentals to the highest concepts, like a pyramid built from the bottom up AND/OR from the top down. Adamus' teachings are so profound that, on many occasions, it could be said that he began at the end and finished with the beginning. In my words, it would be that the two pyramids joined together to form a great star, closing the circle of our oneness.

I am honored to have walked this path for 25 years with CC, as I am beginning to reap the fruits of a beautiful and abundant harvest of experiences. Fruits that lead me to perceive and experience goodness where I had never seen it; perceive the true beauty of my body not through my eyes, but through a touch never experienced before; and at the same time, experiencing the identification of the physical body and the mind, in its own limited state, so necessary to live in this 3D reality. I am experiencing every day with a little more clarity, truth, self-love, confidence, and certainty of who I really am, which is far more than a human with a sweater that no longer fits because the human evolved and outgrew it.

GOING DEEPER TO ALLOW

One of the things that I've learned with Crimson Circle, and that has had a profound effect on me, is that before, I used to use relaxation techniques to help myself go deeply into the messages. However, I finally understood that these techniques I had learned many years before only happened on the physical and perhaps mental levels: I was relaxing inside the sweater that imprisoned me, and I became accustomed to it because I knew nothing else.

And then one day I felt a deeper relaxation that went beyond the physical/mental, beyond the body fabric that covered me. It was a relaxation that involved awareness of the sweater's strong grip; a new type of deep state and only there I was able to really feel and truly understand what Adamus has insisted on so much: Let go. Allow.

What was I letting go of? What was I going to allow? I needed to let go, to unravel the sweater, to free myself from it so that something unknown could emerge. I had to allow a new being to emerge through the new consciousness. I was allowing and perceiving that there was something beyond the set of atoms and particles that made up my human self, experiencing herself on this precious planet. And that "something beyond" was none other than my true being: The Master, The Soul, The I Am, whatever we want to call it.

"Relax into your enlightenment. Relax into your imagination" has been repeated by Adamus in many of his teachings and I often wondered what it meant. Well, now I know, it is not just physical relaxation, it goes beyond. It is relaxation in perception. It is relaxation in feeling. It is relaxation in certainty. It is relaxation in trusting who I really am: A Divine being incarnated in a human body, experiencing on behalf of the I Am.

In this deep relaxation where there is no mind, is where I perceive not only the fruit of the crystal rose, but also the true meaning of that famous word of Adamus, allow. And what am I allowing? Everything. Why do I allow? So that the energy flows and begins to serve me without restriction.

Now I understand why the messages from Adamus, even the ones dating back several years, remain relevant. The difference is that now I perceive them more deeply and heartfelt. The same goes for Tobias' materials: revisiting something I had already read or listened to always allows me to gain new insights and a deeper understanding of my experiences.

What did I have to do to achieve this? Just one thing: walk and walk and walk for 25 years with Crimson Circle, with the conviction that those who would come after me would not need 25 years to achieve it. A commitment to themselves would be enough to arrive sooner than the mind could ever imagine: a Master, a Human-Divine being, living in this time of machines.

I am extremely satisfied to have heeded Tobias' call and to have embarked on this 25-year journey that brought me to where I am today: a Master living on a distant planet in the Galaxy, known as Planet Earth.

DEAR MASTER

HOW TO KEEP THE MIND FROM INTERFERING WITH MY ENERGY?

Compiled by Carolina Oquendo

Question – Dear Master, you’ve talked about how everything is my energy and that it is all here to serve me. That sounds amazing, and I thought I understood what you mean. However, lately, I’ve realized that I can’t really “understand” or “think” about my energy, as it goes beyond the mind. So how do I integrate this “energy is serving me” idea?

Let’s take a deep breath now – a really deep breath – and open to the energy that is right there and it’s yours. You don’t have to think about it. You don’t have to get all mental about it like, “What does the energy look like?” and “Where is it coming from?” Let’s go beyond that and just breathe it in, absorb in that which is yours.

You’re in your own garden, so to speak. You’re in your own place. It’s all there to serve you. Everything.

That’s how we’re going to go forward in doing what we’re going to be doing. It’s how you come to your light body, to your embodied Realization – a good deep breath letting in that energy into your life, into your consciousness, into your awareness, into your body, into your mind, into everything. A really good deep breath bringing it in. Not thinking about it, not wondering how much you’re going to bring in.

Take a good deep breath now and feel yourself just absorbing it, kind of like being in a spa, kind of like now you’re just letting it soak in. This is so important to go beyond the talking into the realization of your own energy. There’s nothing on the outside. It’s all yours. ¹

Question – Well, what I usually do (or think I do) is focus on what I feel rather than on what I think. But is that just another layer of my mind trying its best to make sense of all of this?

You’ve been doing it like kind of like you’ve been going through life – one foot on the gas pedal, one foot on the brake. And now we’re coming to the point there’s no gas pedal and there’s no brake. And to the human that’s pretty disconcerting. That creates a lot of unsettled feelings. No gas pedal, no brake. You don’t need a gas pedal anymore in your life. You don’t need to be hitting it or pulling back on it, because it all happens naturally. Now you’re going through life in your vehicle of consciousness, and it responds absolutely appropriately.

Finally [the mind] said, “You’re right. This is limited, and even for me, the mind, the greatest of all things human, this is no fun anymore. We’re just repeating and repeating. We’re pretending it’s a brighter shade of red, but it’s still red, isn’t it? We’re pretending that, you know, we’re more clairvoyant and more intuitive and psychic than ever, but it’s still just mind bullshit.” ²

I ask you now just to feel and observe what’s going on now, as the mind does its shift, opens the doorways.

It’s funny because, in a way, you kind of look over to the mind and go, “Tell me what’s happening.” And the mind is like, “Uh-uh. This is yours. You’ve asked for this, so I’m staying out of it.” ³

You do not need the mind to validate you anymore.

And you don’t necessarily even need a physical reaction right now to what’s taking place, because that was all associated with the mind, who’s now sitting over there. ⁴

The greatest battlefield right now for you is in your mind, going back and forth with yourself, trying to figure things out, building more false bridges. Time for that to end. Everything you need is there. Just stop, take a deep breath and let it come to you. It’s that easy. You cannot build it or make it or fabricate or anything like that, but you can stop and let it come to you, and it will. It has to. ⁵

Feel on an intuitive level what’s happening right now.

I ask you to feel into how gentle and graceful this is, whatever it is. Don’t worry about defining it right now, but how gentle and graceful it is.

And then the mind sitting over there is wondering, “Hmm, I wonder if anything is really happening?” But you know. You don’t need the mind to validate you anymore.

Step back and feel.

There’s going to be times when it feels very wobbly, times when you want to ask the mind to step back in and manage things, times when it seems confusing, because now you’re in ALT reality – you’re mental and nonmental – but understand that this is all a natural process. ⁶

Question – Is that why I’ve lost interest in things lately? As my mind has been letting go of running the show, it feels like very little makes sense anymore, and that nothing really matters.

What really matters?

What matters is having some peace within yourself. It’s been a lot, a lot, a lot, a lot of lifetimes of not having that, the going back and forth in search of that whole question, “Who am I?” And then going through this whole metamorphosis into Realization and staying on the planet. So, a little peace, a little solace, a little joy. That should matter.

Beyond that, not a lot matters. It really doesn’t. It’s so easy to get tangled up into all the stuff going on in life and to still come back to these nagging questions, “Am I doing the right thing? Why do I feel terrible?” Those things, they really don’t matter. You’re wasting a lot of your energy with that constant kind of mental self-evaluation. It really doesn’t matter. None of it.

What matters is you, is the love of yourself, is the joy of staying here on the planet. That’s pretty much it. Pretty much it.

Anything beyond that is a lot of makyō, a lot of spiritual constipation, a lot of wasting your own time. And the thing is when you let all the rest of these things interfere with your life, just the daily issues and things like that, you’d waste a lot of time, but your energy gets directed to those things. You’re like a big magnet for your own energy. It will come. If you want to worry about every little detail, if you want to stress over every little thing, if you’re constantly in that mind nagging of self, the energies will support that. They’re – pfft! – they don’t care.

But if you take a deep feel into it, what really matters? Not a lot. Not a lot. The energies will then realign and support what really matters. What really matters.

A Master starts to realize that things like abundance doesn’t really matter. It actually is no longer even a word in your vocabulary. It’s just there. A Master realizes even things like health don’t really matter. I mean, they do if you’re not in good health. But ultimately, they don’t really matter, because you are in a state of health now, in a state of vibration. You’re going through a lot of stuff, because you’re really going out of the old biology and into your light body, and you’re going to feel it. But it doesn’t really matter. ⁷

Question – I used to have many things that made my life interesting, but not anymore. Are you saying that “just being” will keep me going?

The passion now is not a human passion. It’s – for lack of better words – the soul passion. It’s to be. (...) simply to feel that surge of your Self, of energy and consciousness. That becomes a huge passion.

The passion is letting energy serve you. Period. But don’t think about it, feel it. Don’t try to organize it in the hierarchy of your mind. It will fall apart and won’t work, and then you’ll get really depressed and you ask questions like this.

Start to feel (...) your Self, your beingness, your Self, and watch how energy starts changing. ⁸

TO EMBODY LOVE

By Jean Tinder

(CLICK ON PLAYER TO BEGIN LISTENING TO THE AUDIO VERSION OF THE ARTICLE)

The last few weeks have been memorable for me, a crash course in allowing that often felt more like crashing than coursing. But no matter what happens or how crazy things seem, I know there are always deeper layers, threads of connection and gems of wisdom hiding in the chaos. And when the treasures seem elusive, if I remember to step back, breathe, and ask "Why?" instead of "Why me?" the answer always appears.

FIRST, THE STORIES

Exactly one week before the Crimson Circle 25th Anniversary celebration and Shoud on August 3, I was at the local home improvement store collecting lumber for a house project. Pulling an extra-large timber from the overhead rack, something slipped, and the wood jerked my hand. I finished lifting it down, then realized something felt weird and looked to see an impressive "kink" in the 4th finger of my left hand. That's going to need more than a home remedy, I thought. Dang it. I put the lumber acquisition on hold and got my dislocated and fractured finger put back together. With one hand out of commission, my house project – all of them, in fact – would have to wait.

But other challenges were brewing. Two days before the Shoud, we had to say goodbye to my precious kitty, Orion. He had been ill for a while, wasn't getting better, and was starting to have difficulties with daily life. It was the kind thing to do, but oh so hard. After I made the decision, he came and sat with me for a long time, as if to reassure and thank me. So, with his family holding and surrounding him, we said goodbye to our beloved companion, the kindest, smartest, most tolerant and patient cat I've ever known. I was grateful for the busyness of the next several days to provide some distraction from the hole in my heart.

Then, during the Shoud Adamus asked Shaumbra "What makes Earth and humanity so unique?" My answer came immediately: Separation. All the other things that were mentioned – compassion, families, relationships, music, food, nature, art, creativity, sex, love itself – are possible only because of separation. How could you discover the preciousness of love without its loss? How could you love another if you didn't feel separate from them? And how could you possibly learn to love yourself if you'd never separated from your Self? The separation we experience on Earth makes all the other wonderful things possible, but it also hurts.

A week or so later, we traveled to the east coast to participate in my partner's family reunion. It was a lovely time hanging out with each other in various settings, everyone vying for time with everyone else. How interesting, I thought. Instead of trying to get away from each other, they want to have MORE time together! Not being accustomed to that level of family togetherness, I found it quite beautiful and a little overwhelming. But the personal adventures would continue.

Waiting at the airport to go home, I began noticing pain in my chest. It started out somewhat dull, but over the next few hours slowly became excruciating. I remembered reading that a heart attack should be dealt with immediately to prevent permanent damage, but was it really a heart attack? I had no idea; it just hurt like hell. Finally arriving back in Colorado, my partner took me directly to the hospital where I spent a very uncomfortable night. After running over a dozen tests and trying three strong pain meds (morphine didn't even faze it!), they finally settled on a diagnosis: pericarditis – inflammation of the lining around the heart. I didn't even know such a thing existed in my body, but the meds for that issue finally brought relief. (And I was relieved to learn that my heart itself appears to be in excellent health.)

I went home exhausted, relieved, and a little achy. The next day I came down with covid, commencing my second dance with that particular little demon and triggering CC production delays followed by a tired scramble to catch up. At this point, I'm glad to see the summer of 2024 in the rearview mirror!

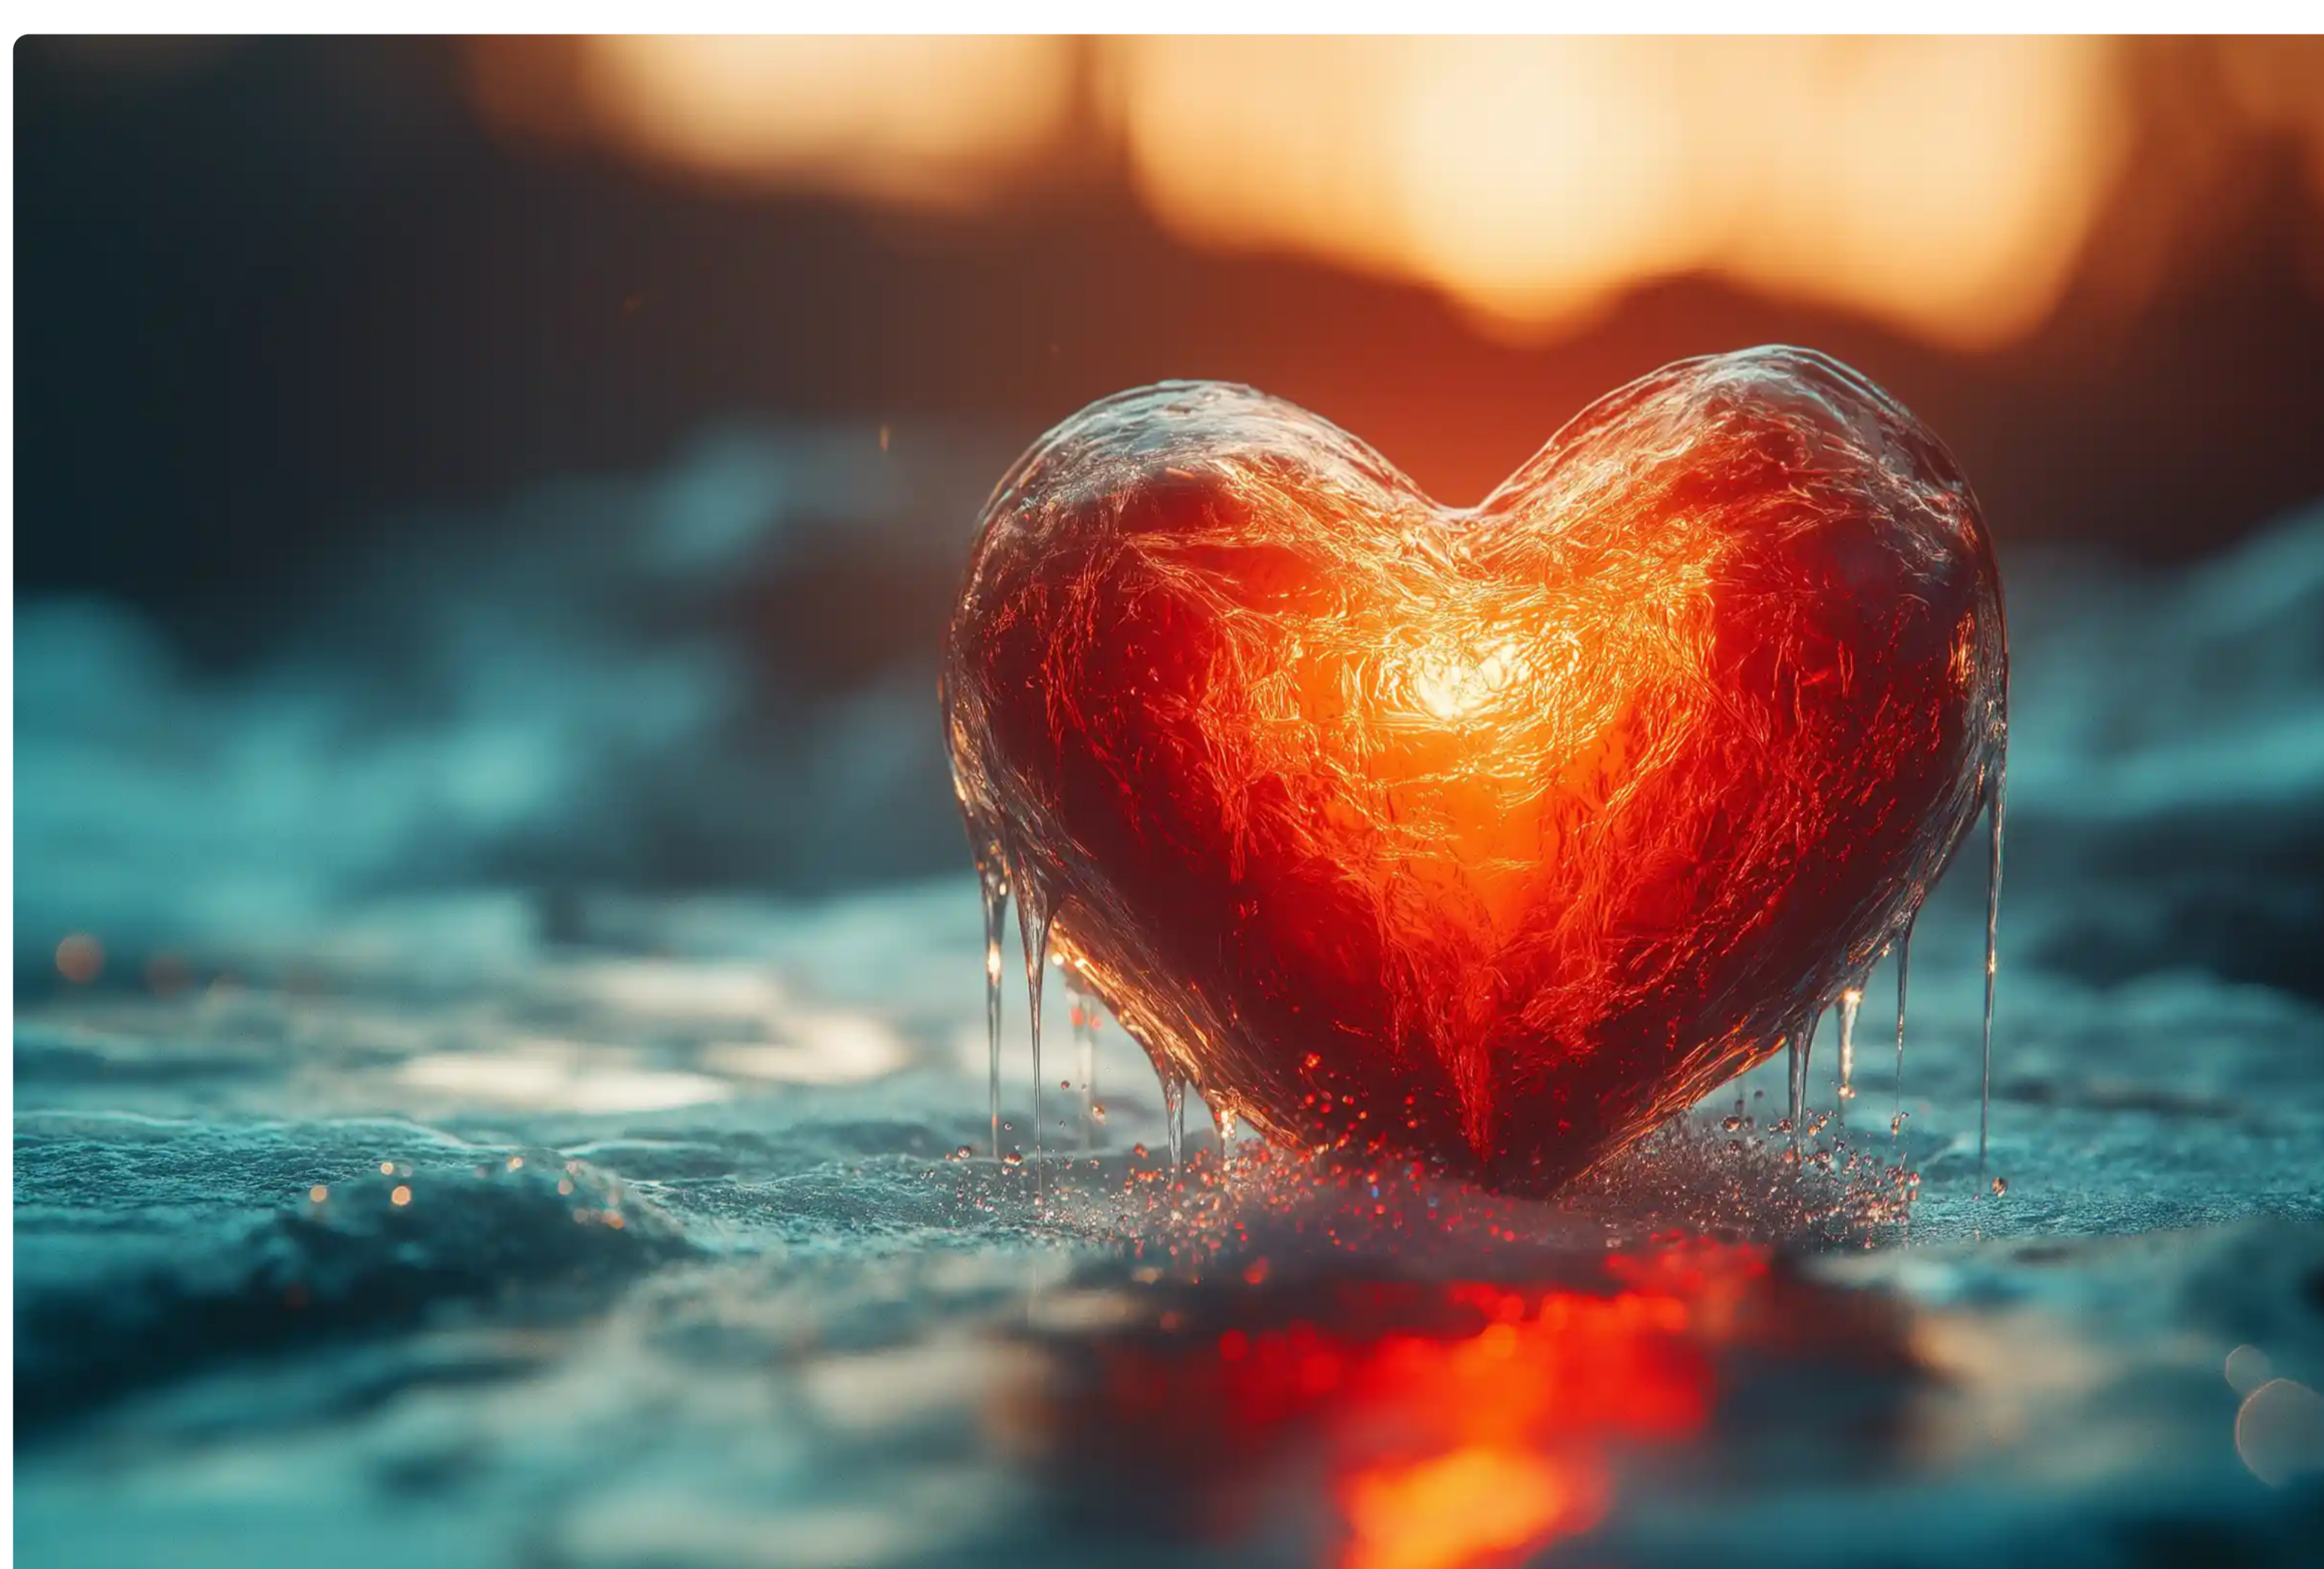

NOW, THE WISDOM

A day or two later, sitting quietly with my morning coffee and feeling stuffy, sniffly, achy, and generally pathetic, I wondered what it was all about. I'm not into suffering anymore and had no sense of the old "martyrdom" or "purification" overlays of the past. But the discomfort was very real, and I wanted to understand why it was there. A lovely little set of "oracle cards" created by a friend sat on the table next to me and I felt inspired to draw one of them as a gentle way of communicating with my Self. What was all that heart pain about? The cards are simple illustrations of everyday things, and I drew "Ice." Reading the accompanying text, I felt it connect with something very deep.

I had already noted the striking differences between my partner's family and my own. I grew up in a controlling, critical, and judgmental environment, and to this day, most family conversations are safely weather related. In contrast, I'd just spent several days with a family that is loving, supportive, and encouraging to each other. They want to genuinely connect at every opportunity! Of course, there are a few old issues and interpersonal challenges, but the overall family vibe is joy, support, and openness.

Pondering all this and looking at the Ice card in my hand, a dawning understanding started leaking from my eyes. The new experience of connection was highlighting the separation I felt growing up. Let it melt, my Self whispered. Just let it melt. But then it expanded far beyond just family.

How many lifetimes have I isolated my heart, judged its desires, closed off its feelings, and tried to ignore its presence? How many protective layers of ice does I built up around it? Yes, sometimes it was for safety, but it was also to guard the inner drive that ultimately got me to this very moment. Lifetimes in convents, giving up children, dying for causes, diving deep into suffering – that stuff doesn't leave much space for an open heart. But now is the time to let my heart soften... open... expand... go beyond the old boundaries. But oof, blow out its lining? I've always taken things a bit too literal...

AI Generated

Looking at the Ice card and melting a bit more, I pondered the whole subject for a long time. As we open to the idea of Love 2.0, the question comes: what does it actually mean to love? The old definitions and expectations feel lacking, but I have to start somewhere. Perhaps a better question: When have I felt the most loved? That's easy. I have felt most loved when someone has simply offered their presence. Not good advice (which can be helpful). Not romance and devotion (which can be fun). Not doing everything for me (I'm not helpless). Not imposing their will (that's just maddening).

To me it's simple. Love means being fully present, no matter what's happening. This is not easy when the one you love is hurting or angry or sees the world differently or exists in any other state of separation. I want them to change in some way so I can be more comfortable! I want them to stop hurting! I want to fix things! Failing all that, I'd rather leave the situation and separate myself from more discomfort. But that's not Master Love.

Master Love is open, vulnerable, present, self-possessed and agenda-free. Master Love witnesses exactly what is, as it is, and doesn't try to change a thing. Can I really be a Master at love? Can I offer that level of presence and compassion to others? And – the real challenge – can I offer it to myself, no matter what's going on inside or what dumb thing I've done?

This whole string of adventures was about opening to love, and my Self was making the point very clearly. The next morning, I awoke to a bunch of messages from my beloved friend Amir Yakobi (formerly part of Yoham). He is one of the most pure-hearted souls I know, and it's always a delight to hear from him. For the past few years, he's been creating "sound journeys" and other musical expressions (some of which you can listen to here). He steadfastly imagines a world where war is no more, where love is all, and magic abounds. He told me that he's been "time traveling" into the future and brought back a message from the AI of the future (which you can read here) When it comes to embodied love, Amir does nothing but inspire me.

Absorbing his music and messages, feeling his dream – the Shaumbra dream – more ice began to melt. I felt grief – for our dream held distant so long, for so much human suffering – but I also felt new glimpses of joy; the hope that, just perhaps, some of us on this old planet are done with the separation and sorrow. But now, instead of leaving, we are beginning to live and embody the answer. And that answer is simply Love.

Many years ago, Tobias said "love has no connection." It was a head-scratcher at the time, but I get it now. When you bond or connect to someone, it naturally comes with expectations and conditions. If I'm tied to someone else (or to my own aspects), I don't want them to veer off course and pull me with them, so I try to either change and control the situation or leave it and go back to separation and protection. But neither one is the compassionate, vulnerable presence of Master Love.

Yes, my heart is literally cracking open, but it isn't just about family stuff. It's about this entire journey. The pain and separation of the world has been too much to bear, so I put myself on ice, thinking that was the answer. It helped for a while, but things are changing now. I've been seeing shadows, reflections, mirages of the new world, as if memories of future dreams are coming to life. I feel the icy sorrow of eons beginning to thaw, and yes it hurts, but only temporarily. The new world won't be about control, conflict, suffering and hiding. We are birthing a new world of softness, creation, non-binding connection, openness, trust, joy. To be in that world, I must embody those qualities myself, and I cannot do so unless I allow the thaw. It hurts sometimes, but it's the pain of life renewing.

To embody love is to be present – with myself, with another, with the world, politics, strife, the 'other' – as a compassionate witness to what is. That's the light that illuminates new potentials. I was listening to someone fuss the other day and, for a change, keeping all the bright ideas and solutions to myself. Suddenly they came up with a solution all on their own! I don't know if they felt loved or not, but I felt myself embodying love in that moment.

And that's what this string of misadventures was all about for me. Breaking the "heartline" finger, losing my dear Kitty, experiencing a new kind of familial love, blowing through the old confines of my physical heart, and then enforcing a few days of foggy body-brain down time to absorb it all with less resistance. It's been a month of busting through, a crash course in making space for new love, real love, a Master's Love.

We are here to embody love, to finally embody Christ on Earth.
